Town mourns, police look for answers

■ Gunman was shy, loner, but left no notes, clues

By John Christoffersen and Matt Apuzzo
Associated Press

NEWTOWN, Conn. — Investigators tried to figure out what led a bright but painfully awkward 20-year-old to slaughter 26 children and adults at a Connecticut elementary school, while townspeople sadly took down some of their Christmas decorations and struggled Saturday with how to go on.

The tragedy brought forth soul-searching and grief around the globe. Families as far away as Puerto Rico began to plan funerals for victims who still had their baby teeth, world leaders extended condolences, and vigils were held around the U.S. Amid the sorrow, stories of heroism emerged, including an account of the Sandy Hook Elementary School principal who lost her life lunging at the gunman, Adam Lanza, in an attempt to overpower him.

Police shed no light on what triggered the second-deadliest school shooting in U.S. history, although state police Lt. Paul Vance said investigators had found “very good evidence... that our investigators will be able to use in painting the complete picture, the how and, more importantly, the why.” He would not elaborate.

Rampage violence cycle rips open old wounds

By Helen O'Neill
Associated Press

A gold plaque hangs next to a bullet hole in the Sikh temple in Oak Creek, Wis., where a lone gunman killed six worshippers and injured three others last August. It is engraved with the words, “We Are One.”

“It frames the wound,” says Pardeep Kaleka, son of former temple president Satwant Singh Kaleka, who died in the massacre. “The wound of our community, the wound of our family, the wound of our society.”

In the past week, that wound has been ripped open with shocking ferocity.

In what has become sickeningly familiar, gunmen opened fire on innocents in what should be the safest of places — first, at a shopping mall in Oregon, and then, unthinkable, at an elementary school in Connecticut.

Once again there were scenes of chaos as rescuers and media descended on the scene. Once again there were pictures of

This activity kicked off about 7:30 a.m. with people unloading

'None of above' won race for city commission

By Frank Boyett
fboyett@thegleaner.com

The big surprise in the Nov. 6 election, of course, was political newcomer Jan Hite taking the most votes in the commission race. She garnered nearly 15.6 percent of the votes at 5,321.

But 8,282 possible votes in the race for Henderson City Commission were left on the table. That's 19.5 percent, according to a computer analysis of the election results done by The Gleaner. Every city voter could have voted for four candidates, but some voted for two or three or even one. That phenomenon is characterized as the “undervote” by election officials.

Those precincts primarily within the city limits where the City Commission undervote was above average were East Bells, where 28 percent of possible votes in the Henderson City Commission race were not cast, followed by 26 percent in West Bells; 24 percent in Kimmel and Hart; 23 percent in Grantwood; 22 percent in East Richardson and Kavanaugh; and 21 percent in Exactly 71 years after the bombing and sinking of the USS Arizona, former Seaman 1st Class Wallace Frank Quillin has joined his fallen shipmates below the ocean waters at Pearl Harbor.

When the Japanese swooped out of the sky on that Sunday morning so long ago, Frank had the good fortune to be on shore leave so he could attend church services on the island.

Lexie Utley Jr.

HARTFORD, Ky. — Lexie Utley Jr., 84, Hartford, died Friday, Dec. 14, 2012, at Ohio County Hospital. Mr. Utley was born Jan. 27, 1928, in Dawson Springs, Ky., to the late Lexie Roland Utley and Pearl Dean Gillim Utley. He was of the Baptist faith and served in the U.S. Navy in World War II. He was a retired farmer, former owner of International Harvester Dealership and Utley's Used Cars, former chief of police of Beaver Dam, Ky., and former deputy sheriff of Ohio County. He enjoyed hunting, fishing, gardening and loved all his dogs, especially Red.

He was preceded in death by his granddaughter, Angie Hudson, who died in 1988. Survivors include one daughter, Judy Utley Hudson, and her husband, Bill, of Henderson; one sister, Regina Utley Hudson of Hartford; one brother, Reginald Utley and his wife, Ruth, of Hartford; one grandson, Dr. William Hudson, and his wife, Becky, of Henderson; three great-grandchildren, Emily Hudson, Meg Hudson and Joe Hudson, all of Henderson; and several nieces and nephews. Services will be at 2 p.m. Monday at Miller-Schapmire Funeral Home in Hartford. The Rev. Glenn Armstrong will officiate. Burial will be in Beulah Cumberland Presbyterian Church Cemetery in Hartford with full military honors presented by Wesley C. Phelps Honor Guard. Friends may call from 4 to 8 p.m. today and after 9 a.m. Monday at funeral home. Family requests expressions of sympathy take the form of contributions to the Ohio County Animal Shelter, 1802 Country Club Lane, Hartford, KY 42347.

soil, arranged that, upon his death, he would be cremated and his ashes later taken to the submerged ship. Ironically, he died Dec. 6, 2006, the eve of the anniversary of the day that truly lived in infamy and plunged this nation into World War II. His ashes remained with a friend until this month, when a beautiful, solemn Pearl Harbor Day ceremony at the USS Arizona Memorial completed Frank's wishes and a team of divers carried the sealed container of his ashes to the ship. That couldn't have happened without Nancy's permission, as she was deemed to be his closest living relative and her consent was required. Naturally, she was invited to attend the elaborate event that included a flag presentation, Navy Honor Guard, and the sounding of taps by a bugler. It had taken the military awhile to locate her, however, and she didn't have time to organize the trip. Nancy, who was only 9 when death rained down on Pearl Harbor, is an Air Force veteran and proud of her cousin, who later was assigned to the USS Neosho, which had been at Pearl Harbor but survived the assault. Frank again escaped death when the Neosho was lost in the Battle of the Coral Sea, being one of only 111 survivors. Nancy will receive the flag from her cousin's ceremony, and no doubt be happy for him that he is, at last, reunited with his friends, who died too soon.

ANOTHER 12/12/12 BIRTH

Turns out we had at least one other local youngster turn 12 on 12/12/12 last week. In addition to Dalten Ralph, who we featured in last Sunday's column, there was South Heights student Cameron King. Cameron's grandmother, Debra Hill, let us know about his big birthday. Congratulations to both young men.

Public record

The following information is based on public records from local and area law enforcement agencies and/or court systems: HENDERSON COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE ■ Amanda L. Taylor, 32, 1000 block of Center Street, was arrested Friday evening on a warrant for first-degree trafficking in a controlled substance. The charge stems from an investigation that began in June. She was lodged at the Henderson County Detention Center under a $10,000 full-cash bond. ■ Robert A. Shelton, 31, Sebree, was located at a residence on Wilson-Station Road on Tuesday and arrested on a warrant from Webster County. During the arrest, authorities located a suspected methamphetamine lab, a tank with anhydrous ammonia and a quantity of meth, according to Detective Bill Mills. Shelton then was charged with manufacturing meth, possession of anhydrous ammonia in an unapproved container with the intent to manufacture meth and first-degree possession of a controlled substance. He was lodged at the Henderson County Detention Center.

WKU student jumps from window

The Associated Press BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — Campus police at Western Kentucky University say a 19-year-old student jumped from a dorm window at Pearce Ford Tower. Police told WBKO-TV that incident happened shortly after midnight on Saturday, and officers found the 19-year-old male still breathing. He was flown to a hospital. His current condition was unknown. Students at the dorm told the station they heard glass break, then saw a body on the ground. The school's website said the coed dorm has 27 stories and is on the south end of the campus.

Poll: Henderson students are more hopeful

By Frank Boyett

270-831-8342

Henderson County school students are more hopeful than they were last year but 45 percent describe themselves as stuck or discouraged, according to a Gallup poll.

A summary of the poll's results, broken down by each school, will be presented to the Henderson County Board of Education when it meets Monday evening.

The districtwide results showed 55 percent of students describing themselves as hopeful, an improvement from the 2011 figure of 50 percent. But 32 percent said they were stuck, down from 35 percent the previous year, and 13 percent said they were discouraged, down from 15 percent the previous year.

Nine out of 10 students said they have an adult who cares about them, and 87 percent believe they will graduate.

But only 62 percent think they will get a good job upon graduation, and only 57 percent think they get good grades.

The school that had the most students with a positive outlook was A.B. Chandler Elementary, where 61 percent said they were hopeful. Only 7 percent felt discouraged, while 32 percent said they were stuck.

That compares with Central Academy, where only 23 percent felt hopeful and 31 percent felt discouraged. Another 46 percent felt stuck.

The school board meeting will begin at 6 p.m. Monday at the Thelma Johnson Early Learning Center.

Some highlights of other items on the agenda include award of contracts for trash collection, high school yearbooks and workers' compensation insurance; a request from the high school bass fishing team advocating the school should offer bass fishing to students; and acceptance of a $10,000 grant from Louisville's WHAS Crusade for Children, which will be used to purchase about 20 iPads and accompanying software applications.

Ky. 1179 in Union Co. will close Monday

Gleaner staff

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet is planning to close Kentucky 1179 in Union County on Monday morning.

The road will be closed between Kentucky 1180/Waverly Road and Kentucky 359 for cross drain replacement work, a news release said. This area is along Kentucky 1179, north of Riverview Mine.

The road closure will begin around 8 a.m., following the morning bus run, officials said. Kentucky 1179 is expected to reopen around 3 p.m.

Fiscal Court to set meeting schedule for next month

By Frank Boyett

270-831-8342

Henderson Fiscal Court will consider setting its meeting schedule for next month when it meets Tuesday.

"Jan. 1 is the normal date we would have met," said Fiscal Court Clerk Sue Baker, "but it is a holiday."

The court previously agreed to open bids on purchasing materials at a special meeting Jan. 8, so the rest of the court's business also is being moved to that date.

"The judge is trying to determine whether we want to have the second meeting of the month the very next week (Jan. 15) or do we want to skip a week and then have another special meeting," Baker said.

Special meetings somewhat limit the court's hands in that they can discuss only items that are specified on the agenda.

The Fiscal Court meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in the top-floor meeting room in the Henderson County Courthouse.

Other items on the fiscal court agenda include:

Flood ordinance: The Fiscal Court will consider final reading of a flood damage prevention ordinance, which is needed before the community's new flood maps become final Feb. 20.

Air board: The court will consider reappointing James A. Tillotson and David Pillar to the Henderson County Air Board.

Routine: The court will accept monthly reports from the county clerk and sheriff, as well as the sheriff's tax receipts, and also will accept payments from the county attorney.

Time running out to vote on school district slogan

Gleaner staff

The Henderson County School District is hosting a contest to develop a new slogan for its logo and other promotional materials.

But time is running out; 4 p.m. Wednesday is the deadline for voting on submissions.

Community members, school staff members and students can vote for their top slogan at www.surveymonkey.com/s/slogan2012.

The new slogan is meant to renew the school district's focus on college and career readiness.

Community members,

Henderson County School staff and students submitted nearly 116 slogans for consideration. The top five slogans have been posted to the website for voting.

The unveiling of the new slogan will be introduced at a future meeting of the Henderson County Board of Education.

Letters to Santa: Watch out for the blazing chimminey!

I always enjoy The Gleaner's Holiday Greetings special section, which appears inside today's edition. If you want to view the holiday through the eyes of a child, take a look at the letters to Santa from local kids.

They pass through our offices on the way to the North Pole, and sometimes I take a peek at them along the way.

There's no doubt children have a special relationship with Santa Claus. They're best buddies so they can speak very freely. And they want to clarify their standing on the naughty or nice issue right away.

Such as: "Dear Christmas Clause: I want to know am I on the naughty list or the good list?"

"I have tried to be a good boy this year — although recently I have been nicknamed 'destruct-o' because I like to get into things and take them apart."

"... I will be a good good boy for ever and ever."

"I have been a good listener."

And if she gets the gift she asks for, "... I would be even better than I'm already!"

A couple of my favorites: "I have been a kind little girl. I've been showing a good romodle."

"I love your whole face." If that last child doesn't get what she wants from Santa, I don't know who will.

We must keep Santa safe. Hence the following heads-up: "I hope you be safe because our chimminey will be blazing with fire."

And well fed. On the menu for Santa are "gookies and milk," "cuoke and millk" and "milk and coocees."

I've long known that in addition to the toy-making elves and the reindeer-tending elves, Santa has a top notch corps of linguist elves. They can translate the following:

"This yoa bio goobdish. a beest I hope you lik. the cake I let froy you and mikce."

"I like to play on My Jroumplen. Do you like to Jup on the Jraumplen? I have Bin prite good, Thak fo the tus I Wut a IPab."

"I want Justin Beiber tickets new winter cote and lechrik gitre and frbb Kidi fire one drechin."

And on one child's list was "a big Honk Honk." Sounds like some of my uncles when I was a kid. Why do we want the presents we want? There are many reasons:

"I would like a tram-poline for Christmas. My brother accidentally jumped through mine when he was bouncing me."

A little girl needs a replacement doll "because my doll broke her arm and I Painted her body. I tried to get it off but it wouldn't come off. So I really need a new one."

After asking for a set of blocks, "And it gives your hands and your mind a workout."

After asking for a light-up pillow, "So when I go to bed and it's dark i won't be scared."

And a very practical explanation: After asking for a certain doll, a girl writes that they "are way too expensive to buy, so you need to bring me one, please!!"

Our children know Christmas is not all about them getting presents. They often are thinking of others as well.

"Can you bring something good for my mommy and daddy too? They worked hard to be good?!"

"Bring something to the homeless kids who don't have anything."

"I would like to say a Very Merry Christmas to My Daddy in Heaven."

And with a little help from the linguist elves, we can easily understand the main point of the following:

"I will try my best to be good this year. And I will be nice to this is my favorite year because its Jeases brithday. And because you brang brathing but that not the resen I like this year I like it because its Jeases brithday."

So what did I learn? If somebody loves our whole face, we are truly loved.

We should always try to be good romodles.

If we are, then maybe we'll get a big Honk Honk.

America's 1 percent deserve pat on back

COLUMNIST

For this statement, The Washington Post awarded Obama three Pinocchios and added, "An administration official conceded the White House had no actual data to back up the president's assertion."

While Obama loudly excoriates the wealthy, the Tax Foundation quietly analyzed the latest IRS data. The facts pulverize Obama's lies.

First, the top 1 percent does pay its "fair share" of taxes.

The top 1 percent of tax filers — Americans with adjusted gross incomes of at least $369,691 — earned 18.9 percent of national income and paid 37.4 percent of all income taxes.

The top 10 percent made at least $116, 623 each. They earned 45.2 percent of national income and paid 70.6 percent of all income taxes.

If these taxpayers are not paying their fair share, Obama should specify a "fair" percentage.

Meanwhile, the bottom 50 percent of taxpayers made less than $34,338 each. This group earned 11.7 percent of national income, but paid just 2.4 percent of all income taxes. The reviled 1 percent coughed up 16 times this amount.

Also, the entire bottom half of tax filers paid a 2.4 percent average tax rate, while the top 1 percent paid 23.4 percent — nearly 10 times more.

So much for the vicious lie that the poor and middle class bear America's tax burden while the rich laugh all the way to the Cayman Islands.

Second, many 1 percenters launch and expand companies, invest their earnings, purchase goods and services and conduct economic activity that creates and sustains the jobs and careers of less wealthy Americans.

According to Bloomberg News: 53 percent of business income reported on individual income tax returns is earned by taxpayers who would be affected by Obama's proposal to boost taxes on those whom Obama denounces as "millionaires and billionaires." Of course, Obamathematics defines "millionaires and billionaires" as married couples who earn at least $250,000 and individuals who make more than $200,000.

Third, the top 1 percent handsomely finance charities.

The 2012 Bank of America Study of High Net Worth Philanthropy in conjunction with the University of Indiana's Center on Philanthropy surveyed 701 Americans with an average net worth of $10.7 million.

In 2011, 95 percent of these "plutocrats" gave to charity. Among the general population, 65 percent made charitable donations.

These wealthy individuals last year donated $52,770, on average, or 8.7 percent of personal income.

Beyond writing checks, 89 percent of these people volunteered. These Americans volunteered an average of 254 hours in 2011. This equals more than 10 full days or 31 eight-hour shifts, in which they rolled up their sleeves to advance their favorite causes.

So, are 1 percenters monsters? You bet!

These monsters pay most of Uncle Sam's bills, keep companies running, underwrite charities and even contribute their valuable time.

GUEST COLUMN

Peetsey feeling fine, finds Christmas spirit

EDITOR'S NOTE: A column last Sunday raised the question of what had happened to Peetsey the Purple Turkey, a regular contributor to the Goodfellows Party Fund. The following arrived last week along with a generous contribution.

By Peetsey the Purple Turkey
Special to The Gleaner

Your article says, "I haven't heard from the Goodbird this year. It's got me worried." How nice of you to be concerned!

One excuse is that I have a few rare breed poult's hanging about who need extraordinary care until they can fend for themselves.

Here at Audubon Park they must be protected from the elements and other unfriendly factors, if you know what I mean. Chilly evenings, I keep them warm with hot water bottles. Heat lamps could cause a fire in the Museum if jostled.

So, no, Peetsey hadn't contracted bird flu. Neither had a Thanksgiving mishap befallen me. But I have lost much sleep over the wildly popular Angry Birds game. Imagine for more than a century your mission has been to promote better man-bird relations — how would you respond to an addictive amusement which portrays your heroes as "angry" and encourages people to bang birds into stuff? Enough about that.

Now that November has slipped into December, it's time to indulge in the Christmas season, a space where everything seems to work together so harmoniously. The world just tends to get a little nicer. People and birds dust off their manners, open doors for others, smile more and end their transactions with, "Merry Christmas." The three magic words, "please" and "thank you," ring out more often and warmhearted Hendersons lavishly give to the Goodfellows Christmas Party, removing some of the burdens which have been wrongly laid upon childhood's innocent shoulders.

The life that is the light of all men is born and shines in the darkness — sometimes tiny twinkle lights, sometimes full flood lights. But whether in subtle, gentle ways or in dramatic, flourishing ways, the Light overcomes.

So let's do what we can to pump up the Christmas spirit and have ourselves a merry little Christmas. I must skedaddle and head back to my Museum quarters to bake baby birdy cookies, decorate them with frosting, attach ribbons to their crowns and suspend them from trees.

All this, after I consume some sugar plums with tea, that is. Gobble, gobble!

Perspective

CCC was excavating Indian mounds here in 1930s

Between 1936 and 1941 there was quite a bit of digging going on in Henderson County.

At the time it was characterized as archaeology; nowadays it would be called grave robbing by some. I guess it just depends on your cultural perspective.

I never got into Native American artifacts, but I understand the thrill of the hunt. Back in my youth I did quite a bit of digging for old bottles and other Western Americana. (Just to give you an idea of my nerdiness back then, I bought my first car with proceeds from selling my antique fruit jar collection.)

So I'm going to leave aside any judgment of the practice, and simply report what happened back then. A lengthy article in The Gleaner of Dec. 12, 1937, began with this paragraph:

"Henderson's foundation rests upon a prehistoric village built and inhabited by aborigines hundreds of years before the coming of the white man!"

The article then went on to list some of the sites that had been excavated by crews from Camp Cromwell, Henderson's Civilian Conservation Corps installation, as well as sites surveyed by University of Kentucky Professors W.S. Webb and W.D. Funkhouser.

"At the foot of Sixth Street, while excavating for a warehouse foundation, workmen found an ancient grave containing various artifacts belonging to an ancient race," such as arrowheads, pottery and tools.

FRANK BOYETT

"Boys digging a cave between Third and Fourth streets also located a grave containing skeletons and excellent artifacts. The same factors which make the site desirable for Henderson probably influenced aborigines in their choice of their village location."

Another article that ran Dec. 31 that year was about Fred T. Phillips speaking to the Rotary Club. Phillips was the educational adviser at Camp Cromwell, and had been a big instigator of the CCC's excavations.

He told the Rotarians that one carved mask discovered here had recently sold for the "dizzy" price of $800, and that Funkhouser had concluded that Mosquito Point in Atkinson Park once contained an Indian village, as well as a mound. Phillips said he had found relics in Atkinson Park.

The first article went on to talk about the "numerous mounds scattered throughout Henderson County" that had been investigated. Diamond Island, for instance, contained "an extensive site, consisting chiefly of mounds," but that "since the island has been in cultivation for some time the mounds are greatly reduced in size (although) some fine pottery has

One of the largest mounds in Kentucky you've probably driven over hundreds of times. One of the piers for the northbound span of the Twin Bridges pierces an Indian mound, which had yielded numerous artifacts.

Furthermore, "a cluster of four mounds, so arranged that they are known as 'double-headed' mounds, and located on the Anderson farm directly opposite Diamond Island in a bottom known as Indian Valley. Many artifacts, bones and other ancient objects have been retrieved, including a lump of lead three inches square."

The CCC's excavation work had begun in August of 1936 under the direction of Phillips, who was saving the artifacts for display in the Audubon State Park museum, which was then under construction, according to March 10, 1937, article in

The Gleaner. That article noted the mound directly under the Twin Bridges, as well as a large midden about a quarter-mile north of the mound. (A midden is a garbage heap, composed in this instance mostly of mussel shells.)

"Henderson County has long been listed as one rich in Indian history and many valuable relics found in this vicinity have gone to various museums throughout the world."

The Dec. 12 article concluded by listing "other sites built by aborigines" that included "rock shelters, stone graves and village sites." They included a "stone grave cemetery" where corpses were lined with rock slabs about four miles west of Smith Mills, the Rock House near Robards "and an artificial basin hewn out of stone in a large spring near the mount of Lick Creek," all of which constitute "evidence that the whole of Henderson County was the dwelling place of prehistoric tribes."

One final note: Those disturbing Native American bones can face drastic consequences. After the 1988 looting of up to 1,200 graves in Union County both Kentucky and Indiana made the practice a felony.

100 YEARS AGO

According to a Dec. 12, 1912, article in The Gleaner, the Morganfield City Council yielded to a crusade by the community's "leading women" and passed an ordinance prohibiting such dances as the Turkey Trot, the Bunny Hug, the Jelly Wobble, the Tangleworm Wiggle "or other like lewd and lascivious dances."

None of them had been popular there, but the women were just making sure. It was thought to be the first Kentucky city to pass such an ordinance.

50 YEARS AGO

Henderson's population took a jump of about 5,000

when the Henderson City Commission passed three ordinances annexing subdivisions surrounding the city, according to The Gleaner of Dec. 19, 1962.

The move extended the city limits to Audubon Raceway on the north, Highlander Acres on the east, and the South Y on the south, encompassing about 3,733 acres. The annexation was later unsuccessfully contested in the courts.

25 YEARS AGO

Alcan Aluminun's decision to restart its third potline prompted more than 1,800 people to apply for the 135 jobs the move was expected to produce, The Gleaner reported on this date in 1987.

Pay scales at the aluminum smelter at that time averaged about $25,000, or about twice that of other local industries.

Crop insurance target in ‘cliff’ deal

■ Leaders seek compromise

By Mary Clare Jalonick
Associated Press

WASHINGTON – Rural lawmakers worry $9 billion in annual federal crop insurance subsidies are an easy target for spending cuts in a “fiscal cliff” deal so they’re shopping around for a late compromise on a farm bill to protect them.

The chairmen of the House and Senate Agriculture committees already were set to make a sizable contribution to deficit reduction through a new farm bill. There were $2.3 billion in annual cuts to other farm programs and food stamps in a Senate version and $3.5 billion in annual cuts in a measure awaiting House action.

But they hit an impasse last week while trying to merge the bills into a single package. It’s the same problem confronting President Barack Obama and House Speaker John Boehner, R-Ohio.

The farm-state leaders hope if they can agree on a farm bill, Obama and Boehner might include it as a deficit-reducing component of a broader fiscal cliff deal.

While cutting food stamps and other farm programs, the Senate and House agriculture bills preserve crop insurance subsidies that cover a big portion of farmers’ losses due to bad weather. Committee leaders from both parties say farmers tell them crop insurance is the program they depend on most.

U.S. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta meets with troops at Kabul International Airport on Friday, before boarding his plane and heading back to Washington.

U.S. commanders are upbeat about war in Afghanistan

■ More troops could come home soon

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan – U.S. commanders are offering glowing reviews of their 2012 war campaign, upbeat assessments that could be interpreted as leeway for President Barack Obama to order another round of troop withdrawals next summer.

Obama faces a tension between calls by Democrats and even some Republicans to wind down the war more quickly and the military’s desire to avoid a too-fast pullout that might squander hard-won sacrifices.

U.S. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta has not yet recommended to Obama a specific pace of withdrawals for 2013. But during the Pentagon chief’s two-day visit to the war zone this past week, commanders suggested that things are going better than is generally believed by an American public weary of war after 11 years.

Maj. Gen. Robert Abrams, for example, cited “astounding” progress in the Zaray district of Kandahar province, where the Taliban once held sway. Abrams, the top coalition commander in southern Afghanistan, said Afghan forces are now “dominating” in that district.

He told reporters he foresees a smaller coalition force by next summer, but he was not recommending or predicting any U.S. reductions.

He was arguing that Afghan forces are performing so well that they should be able to hold their ground in 2013 with less coalition combat power.

No decision on 2013 U.S. troop withdrawals is likely to be announced until after Afghan President Hamid Karzai meets with Obama in Washington in early January. The U.S. now has 66,000 troops in Afghanistan.

Panetta announced in Kabul on Thursday that Karzai had agreed to go to Washington the week of Jan. 7 to discuss the pace of coalition troop withdrawals as well as a U.S. military role in his country after December 2014, when the international coalition’s combat mission is to end.

Obama withdrew 23,000 U.S. troops this year, following a drawdown of 10,000 in 2011.

There have been calls in Congress for Obama to accelerate the withdrawal next year, and from commanders’ own assessments of progress, it appears such a speedup could be coming.

Merger a step closer as pilots OK contract

United Airlines pilots agreed to a joint union contract, bringing the airline closer to finalizing its merger with Continental.

The new four-year contract, which includes raises averaging 43 percent and bigger retirement contributions, covers those who came from United as well as pilots who flew for Continental before the carriers merged in 2010 into United Continental Holdings Inc. Pilots now fly under only the United name.

As part of the deal, the airline’s roughly 10,000 pilots also will divide a $400 million lump sum. In exchange, the contract gives United Continental the ability to launch a major expansion of the use of larger regional jets with 70 or more seats. Those jets, most ranging in size from 50 to 76 seats, are operated by regional airlines.

Clinton faints, suffers concussion

WASHINGTON – Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton, who skipped an overseas trip this past week because of a stomach virus, sustained a concussion after fainting, the State Department said Saturday.

The 65-year-old Clinton, who’s expected to leave her job soon, was recovering at home after the incident last week and is being monitored by doctors, according to a statement by aide Philippe Reines.

The State Department said Clinton was dehydrated because of the virus, fainted and sustained a concussion. She will continue to work from home in the week ahead.

ALABAMA

Police kill two shooting suspects

BIRMINGHAM – Police in Alabama fatally shot two suspects Saturday following separate shooting incidents 75 miles apart that left several others, including two officers, wounded.

Authorities said Jason Letts, 38, of Jemison, opened fire early Saturday morning at a hospital in Birmingham, wounding a police officer and two employees before being shot and killed by another officer.

In a separate incident, police officers in eastern Alabama shot an assailant armed with an AK-47 assault rifle toward the end of a pursuit that left several people injured.

The pursuit began after a shooting in Cleburne County, Oxford police Lt. L.G. Owens told The Anniston Star. The county is near the Georgia state line.

Mennonite women restrained, assaulted

LANCASTER – Three elderly Mennonites were tied up and assaulted with a stun gun by a home invader who raged against their faith and vandalized their Bible, authorities said.

The female victims, who are between 84 and 90 years old, remained hospitalized Saturday.

The ordeal began Friday morning while two of the women were at a house in Clay Township. The intruder came to the door, posing as an insurance salesman, and was let in, police said.

During the assault, a third woman arrived at the home and was attacked and restrained, police said.

The man later fled with cash and valuables.

Militants attack airport, nine killed

PESHAWAR – Suicide bombers armed with rockets attacked the military side of a Pakistani airport in the northwestern city of Peshawar Saturday, killing four civilians and wounding more than 30, officials said. Five militants also were killed.

Peshawar is on the edge of Pakistan’s tribal region, the main sanctuary for al-Qaida and Taliban militants in the country. The city has frequently been attacked in the past few years, but Saturday was the first strike against the airport, which is jointly used by the air force and civilian authorities.

The militants fired three rockets at the airport, two of which hit a wall ringing the premises, said Mian Iftekhar Hussain, the information minister in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa province, where Peshawar is the capital. The third landed near a government building outside the wall, Hussain said.

MALI

PM announces new government

BAMAKO – Mali’s interim prime minister who took office after soldiers behind a coup arrested his predecessor several days ago has chosen a new government, state television reported late Saturday, with key posts going to people linked to the coup leader.

The political upheaval has raised new concerns about the ability of the Malian military to take part in a regional operation to retake the northern part of the country, which is now controlled by Islamist extremists who are carrying out public executions and amputations.

Interim Prime Minister Diango Cissoko’s list was announced Saturday evening, days after he was chosen to replace Cheikh Modibo Diarra. The interim prime minister post was created as part of an attempt to return Mali to civilian rule following the coup.

NIGERIA

Governor, five others die in helicopter crash

LAGOS – A navy helicopter crashed Saturday in Nigeria’s oil-rich southern delta, killing a state governor and five other people, in the latest air disaster to hit Africa’s most populous nation, officials said.

Nigeria’s presidency said in a statement that the governor of the central Nigerian state of Kaduna, Patrick Yakowa, died in the crash.

The former national security adviser, General Andrew Azazi, also died in the crash, the statement said. Azazi was fired in June amid growing sectarian violence in Nigeria, but maintained close ties with the government. The other victims were aides to Yakowa and Azazi and the two helicopter pilots, it said.

Oil rig arrives for new exploration

HAVANA – A Norwegian-owned platform arrived in waters off Cuba’s north-central coast for exploratory drilling by the Russian oil company Zarubezhneft, authorities said Saturday, renewing the island’s search for petroleum after three failed wells this year.

Drilling is to begin “in the coming days” and take six months, according to a notice published by the Communist Party newspaper Granma. The depth of the project was given as 21,300 feet (6,500 meters).

Egyptian men line up outside a polling station to cast their votes during a referendum on a disputed constitution drafted by Islamist supporters of President Morsi in Cairo on Saturday. The arguments among voters standing in line signaled that the charter debate will continue.

Egyptians take quarrel over charter to the polls

■ Islam’s role in constitution divides nation

By Hamza Hendawi and Maggie Michael
Associated Press

CAIRO – Egyptians took their quarrel over a draft constitution to polling stations Saturday after weeks of violent turmoil between the newly empowered Islamists and the mostly liberal opposition over the future identity of the nation.

Regardless of the outcome, the heated arguments among voters standing in line signaled that the referendum over the contentious charter is unlikely to end Egypt’s worst political crisis since the revolution that ousted Hosni Mubarak nearly two years ago.

The voting capped a nearly two-year struggle over the post-Mubarak identity of Egypt, with the latest crisis over the charter evolving into a dispute over whether Egypt should move toward a religious state under President Mohammed Morsi’s Muslim Brotherhood and their ultraconservative Salafi allies, or one that retains secular traditions and an Islamic character.

Underlining the tension, some 120,000 army troops were deployed to help the police protect polling stations and state institutions after clashes between Morsi’s supporters and opponents over the past three weeks left at least 10 people dead and about 1,000 wounded.

The large-scale deployment did not stop a mob of supporters of ultraconser-vative cleric Hazem Salah Abu-Ismael attacking the Cairo offices of the liberal Wafd party, a member of an opposition alliance that has campaigned against the draft constitution.

“Today I would like to offer my condolences to the Egyptian people on the collapse of the rule of law,” Wafd leader El-Sayed el-Badawi said.

The opposition called for a “no” vote, while Morsi’s supporters said the constitution will help end the political instability that has roiled Egypt since Mubarak was overthrown. Clerics have defended the constitution as a document that champions Islam.

The draft would empower Islamists to carry out the most widespread and strictest implementation of Islamic law that modern Egypt has seen.

Elections crucial with Chavez ill

■ President’s influence comes into question

By Fabiola Sanchez
Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela – Hugo Chavez’s cancer has upended politics in Venezuela, transforming today’s nationwide elections for state governors and legislators into a test of his legacy that could chart the country’s future in the uncertain months ahead.

For the first time in his nearly 14 years in power, the charismatic, voluble Venezuelan president has been unable to actively participate in such a campaign.

The question now hovering over the vote: Will his illness help or hurt the ruling apparatus he has built almost single-handedly and strengthen his left-winged agenda?

If Chavez’s camp can maintain dominance in the country’s 23 governorships, all but eight of which it holds, it can forge ahead with plans to solidify his “socialist revolution” by fortifying grassroots citizen councils that are directly funded by the central government.

Chavez’s backers have framed the election as a referendum on his legacy, angling for the sympathy vote.

For the opposition, the elections are apt to determine the fate of its leadership.

The most pivotal race involves Henrique Capriles, who gave Chavez his stiffest challenge yet in the Oct. 7 presidential election by winning 44 percent of the votes.

Do you suffer from Cat Allergies?

An allergy to cat dander is one of the most common allergies, affecting an estimated 26 million people in the U.S. Symptoms of cat allergies can include sneezing, runny or stuffy nose, red or itchy eyes, hives or a rash on the chest or face, coughing or wheezing after coming in contact with a cat.

If you suffer from symptoms associated with a cat allergy, you may qualify to participate in a clinical research study being conducted at Deaconess Clinic. You must be age 12 to 65 to participate. Study participants receive no-cost, study-related office visits with board-certified allergists, study medication and compensation for time and travel.

Health insurance is not required for participation.

To find out if you qualify, or to receive more information, please call the Research InfoLine at 812-474-7184 or toll free at 1-877-654-0311.

St. Anthony's Hospice conducting focus group Monday

Special to The Gleaner

Members of the Henderson Chamber of Commerce are invited to participate in a focus group designed to help St. Anthony's Hospice refine and improve its services to the community.

The interactive meeting will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Monday at the chamber office at 230 Second St.. A free lunch will be provided.

The session will be facilitated by St. Anthony's Executive Director Mark Chumbler and Director of Outreach Kendra Marsh. The focus group meeting is one of several organized by St. Anthony's to get public feedback.

"In an effort to change the end-of-life culture locally, St. Anthony's has been conducting focus groups around the area for more than a year," according to Chumbler. "Each focus group is designed to solicit what matters most to families as individuals they love face the end-of-life as well as to explain how hospice care greatly adds to general contentment and peace for the individual and especially the family."

Chumbler has led St. Anthony's Hospice since 2005. He received a masters degree from the University of Southern Indiana in 1999.

Marsh, who worked in marketing and operations at Novartis Pharmaceuticals before joining the St. Anthony's staff, received a masters degree from Murray State University in 1999.

For more information or to reserve a spot, contact the chamber Monday morning at 826-9531 or info@hendersonchamber.org. The meeting will be limited to the first 16 participants who make a reservation.

found no note or manifes- to from Lanza of the sort they have come to expect after murderous rampages such as the Virginia Tech bloodbath in 2007 that left 33 people dead.

The mystery deepened as Newtown education of- ficials said they had found no link between Lanza's mother and the school, contrary to news reports that said she was a teacher there. Investigators said they believe Adam Lanza attended Sandy Hook El- ementary many years ago, but they had no explana- tion for why he went there Friday.

Lanza shot and killed his mother, Nancy Lanza, at the home they shared, weeping survivors clutch- ing one another, of candle- light vigils and teddy bears left as loving memorials. And once again a chorus of pundits debated gun control and violence.

“Are there any sanctu- aries left?” Kaleka asked. “Is this a fact of life, one we have become content to live with? Can we no longer feel safe going Christ- mas shopping in a mall, or to temple, or to the mov- ies? What kind of society have we become?”

As this year of the gun lurches to a close, leaving a bloody wake, we are left to wonder: What is the mean- ing of this?

Even before Portland and Newtown, we saw a former student kill seven people at Oikos Univer- sity in Oakland, Calif. We saw gunmen in Seattle and Minneapolis each kill five people and then themselves. We saw the midnight premiere of “The Dark Knight Rises” at a theater in Aurora, Colo., devolve into a bloodbath, as 12 people died and 58 were wounded.

But those who study mass shootings say they are not becoming more common.

“There is no pattern, there is no increase,” says crimi- nologist James Allen Fox of Boston’s Northeastern Uni- versity, who has studied the subject since the 1980s.

The random mass shootings that get the most media attention are the rarest, Fox says. Most people who die of bullet wounds knew their killer.

Society moves on, he says, because of our ability to distance ourselves from West Weaverton.

All of those precincts were carried by Commis- sioner Robert Pruitt except for Hart, Grantwood and West Weaverton. Hite carried Grantwood and West Weaverton, while Jesse Johnston IV carried Hart, but by only one vote over Pruitt.

Pruitt denied he has in- structed his supporters to vote only for him, but said he has no problem with them doing that.

“I don’t know anything about people voting for me and not voting for anybody else,” he said. “That prob- ably goes on for a whole lot of (candidates). People should vote for who they think is going to serve them. I don’t want to tell them to be voting for them just to be voting for them.”

Hite, on the other hand, took a different point of view, saying she thinks voters should use all four votes available to them to fully participate in the democratic process.

“If you don’t vote for all four, then you can’t com- plain about who is elect- ed,” she said.

“I understand the senti- ment behind voting for just one person to make sure you do everything you can to get that one person in there. But you have to understand that that one person has only one-fifth of the vote” when the city commission makes decisions.

Those precincts with low city commission un- dervote percentages were then drove to the school in her car with at least three of her guns, forced his way inside and opened fire in two classrooms, authori- ties said. Within minutes, he killed 20 children, six adults and himself.

On Saturday, Chief Medical Examiner Dr. H. Wayne Carver said all the victims at the school were shot with a rifle, at least some of them up close, and all of them apparently were shot more than once. All six adults killed at the school were women. Of the 20 children, eight were boys and 12 were girls. All the children were 6 or 7 years old.

Asked how many bullets were fired, Carver said, “I’m lucky if I can tell you how many I found.”

Asked if the children suffered, he paused. “If so,” the horror of the day, and because people believe these tragedies are “one of the unfortunate prices we pay for our freedoms.”

Grant Duwe, a criminol- ogist with the Minnesota Department of Correc- tions who has written a history of mass murders in America, said while mass shootings rose between the 1960s and the 1990s, they dropped in the 2000s. And mass killings actually reached their peak in 1929, according to his data.

Chances of being killed in a mass shooting, he says, probably are no greater than being struck by lightning.

Still, he understands the public perception when mass shootings occur in places such as malls and schools. “There is this feel- ing that could have been me. It makes it so much more frightening.”

Duwe says the cycle has gone on for generations.

“Mass shootings pro- voke instant debates about violence and guns and mental health and that’s been the case since Charles Whitman climbed the tower at the University of Texas in 1966,” he said, referring to the engineer- ing student who killed 13 people and an unborn child and wounded 32 others.

“Rampage violence seems to lead to repeated cycles of anguish, investi- gation, recrimination and heated debate, with little real progress in preven- tion,” wrote John Harris, clinical assistant professor of medicine in the College of Medicine at the Uni- versity of Arizona, in the June issue of American Journal of Public Health. “These types of events can lead to despair about their inevit- ability and unpredictability.

Newcomb at 12 percent; East Weaverton at 13 per- cent; Balmoral and East Fair at 14 percent; Soaper and West Richardson at 16 percent and Larue, Young, Frontier and Audubon Heights at 17 percent.

PRESIDENT VOTE

The presidential race, on the other hand, had a very low incidence of under- votes, with only 112 out of nearly 19,000 people. Ten of the 46 precincts had none at all, while the most in any precinct was 11 votes not cast in West Weav- erton, eight among absen- tee voters, seven in South Corydon, and six each in Smith Mills, Anthoston and South Wolf Hills. Twenty precincts had only one or two undervotes.

Those precincts where President Barack Obama showed his greatest strength were West Bells, where he had 81 percent of the presidential vote, and East Bells, where he had 69 percent. Those areas historically have had the city’s highest percentages of black voters.

As a general rule, Obama did better in inner city neighborhoods, while Republican Mitt Romney prevailed in the subdivi- sions and rural areas.

Obama had 64 percent of the vote in Kavanaugh; 59 percent in Harris; 58 percent in Kimmel and Audubon Heights; 55 per- cent in both Fair precincts; and 53 percent in Hart and East Richardson.

The precincts Rom- ney handily carried were North Zion at 73 percent; North Robards at 70; the

he said, “not for very long.”

The tragedy plunged Newtown into mourning and added the picturesque New England commu- nity of handsome colonial homes, red-brick side- walks and 27,000 people to the grim map of towns where mass shootings in recent years have periodi- cally reigned the national debate over gun control but led to little change.

Signs around town read, “Hug a teacher today,” “Please pray for New- town” and “Love will get us through.”

“People in my neigh- borhood are feeling guilty about it being Christmas. They are taking down decorations,” said Jeannie Pasacreta, a psychologist who was advising parents struggling with how to talk to their children.

unteers just before the sacking began.

“Take your time and make sure each sack has a complete set of clothes.”

Volunteer Heidi Wood was seated in the floor, going through a large sack of toys, separating them into piles based on whether the items were best suited for a girl or boy.

Heidi Wood accompanied her daughter, Lydia Wood, who is a member of the Henderson Soccer Club, which was among the groups pitching in on Saturday.

“I’m here with the soccer team. Their coach, Ryan Scott, asked the girls to come,” she said. “I wanted to just come out and help. My daughter was coming, so I decided to come with her.”

Scott, who is also a third-grade teacher at South Heights Eleme- ntary School, said he encouraged his team to participate. Scott said it’s important for the players to see what “other kids go through. Especially, after what happened yesterday (in Connecticut).”

“I’m a schoolteacher. I didn’t have a good night thinking about those kids and my kids here,” he said. “I think we are too disconnected. So we need to do more service.”

Scott said about 15 team members volunteered to assist with party preparations. “This is our first year” to participate with the Goodfellows activity, he said, “I know a lot of my students (from South Heights) will benefit from this.”

“When I got involved 35 years ago, we had maybe 150 kids and a budget of $10,000,” said Richard Pender- graft, an organizer.

In early years, he said, the cloth- ing was purchased from secondhand stores, and children received one toy.

“Over the years, it got bigger,” he said. “We try to buy in variety, and we get them new things.”

Pendergraft said the shopping takes place throughout the year, but gets pretty concentrated the last two weeks before the party.

He said with the Goodfellows Par- ty Fund exceeding its $33,000 goal, the surplus will be used to begin buying clothing for next year’s party.

“This is such a community (ef- fort),” Pendergraft said. “You couldn’t buy all of this stuff for $33,000. You can’t buy it for $50,000. People give us so much.”

“The key to it is we want to help the kids who wouldn’t have Christ- mas,” he said.

“We don’t want them to feel underprivileged. We want them to think of this as a party. We want them to come and enjoy it. That’s the success.”

Kayla Jennings, one of Saturday’s volunteers, said she was more than willing to give her time.

STRAIGHT TICKETS

Many of those votes were the result of Repub- licans casting a straight party ticket. Proportion- ally speaking, those fa- voring Republicans were much more likely to vote that way than those favor- ing Democrats.

A total of 7,600 people, or 40.5 percent of those voting, cast a ballot where they checked a straight party ticket. That broke down into 4,399 Democ- rats, 3,100 Republicans, 72 Libertarians and 29 for the Green Party.

The list of the dead was released Saturday, but in the tightly knit town, nearly everyone already seemed to know someone who died.

Among the dead: well- liked Principal Dawn Hochsprung, 47, who town officials say tried to stop the rampage; school psy- chologist Mary Sherlach, 56, who probably would have helped survivors grapple with the tragedy; a teacher thrilled to have been hired this year; and a 6-year-old girl who had just moved to Newtown from Canada.

“Next week is going to be horrible,” said the town’s legislative council chair- man, Jeff Capeci, thinking about the string of funerals the town will face. “Horri- ble, and the week leading into Christmas.”

School Board Chair- woman Debbie Leidlein spent Friday night meeting with parents who lost chil- dren and shivered as she recalled those conversa- tions. “They were asking why. They can’t wrap their minds around it. Why? What’s going on?” she said. “And we just don’t have any answers for them.”

Authorities said Lanza had no criminal history, and it was not clear wheth- er he had a job. Lanza was believed to have suffered from a personality disor- der, said a law enforce- ment official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Another law enforce- ment official, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said Lanza had been diag- nosed with Asperger’s, a mild form of autism often characterized by social awkwardness. People with the disorder are often highly intelligent. While they can become frustrat- ed more easily, there is no evidence of a link between Asperger’s and violent be- havior, experts say.

The law enforcement of- ficials insisted on anonym- ity because they were not authorized to discuss the unfolding investigation.

Acquaintances describe the former honor student as smart but odd and remote.

Olivia DeVivo, now a student at the University of Connecticut, recalled Lanza always came to school toting a briefcase and wearing his shirt but- toned all the way up. “He was very different and very shy and didn’t make an effort to interact with anybody” in his 10th-grade English class, she said.

North Robards and South Cairo in the race for the 7th House District seat. Incumbent state Rep. John Arnold, D-Sturgis, squeaked out a win by five votes in that race across three counties. Kline made a particularly strong showing in North Niagara, which he carried with 62 percent of the vote.

TURNOUT

Henderson County ranked 49th among Ken- tucky’s 120 counties with a voter turnout of 58.3 per- cent, which translates into 18,736 people at the polls.

Balmoral precinct once again had the highest voter turnout at 70.2 percent, down from 78.4 percent in the 2008 election.

Balmoral was followed by Larue at 67.4 percent; South Niagara at 67; North Cairo at 65; Highlander at 64.7; North Zion at 64.4; North Niagara at 63.9; East Baskett at 63.7; and South Zion, West Baskett and North Wolf Hills at 63.3.

Young, for decades con- sidered the bellwether of voting precincts, was av- erage at 60.4 percent. In the 2008 presidential elec- tion it had a voter turnout of 67.2 percent.

Wiltjer sparks Cats past Lipscomb

■ Sophomore gets first double-double in 88-50 UK victory

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Kyle Wiltjer hit a shooting slump recently, and when he tried to rely on long-range shots to buoy his game, his total performance faded and his minutes dropped for Kentucky. So the sophomore decided to work on it in two ways: Take more shots in the gym and focus more on rebounding than anything else during games. It seems to have paid off Saturday. Wiltjer had his first career double-double, finishing with 23 points and a career-high 12 rebounds in Kentucky's 88-50 win over Lipscomb. Wiltjer came off the bench for the first time this season — point guard Ryan Harrow took his spot in the starting five — but logged 24 minutes and was the key to Kentucky's offense. He finished 8 of 12 from the field and 7 of 9 from 3-point range. "I don't care whether he made shots; he got 12 rebounds," Kentucky coach John Calipari said.

"We had to go in there and mix it up a little bit." Excluding a 7-of-11 3-point performance against Lafayette on Nov. 16, Wiltjer has shot 10 of 38 from deep this season. He was hot Saturday, though, making his first three 3-point attempts in the first half and equaling his highest scoring game of the season. "Being a shooter, you just try not to think about previous games," Wiltjer said. "Just go in the game and be confident, just have the same approach every game." Lipscomb (4-5) kept its deficit within single digits much of the first half until the Wildcats scored six straight points to close the half with a 43-29 lead. But Kentucky (7-3) broke the game open in the second half by outscoring the Bisons 22-3 over a five-minute stretch. Wiltjer had six points in that stretch, and Harrow had four. Harrow played aggressively on offense for the second straight game after returning timidly from missing four games with flu-like symptoms and an undisclosed family issue. He led the Wildcats with 13 field-goal attempts, making six and finishing with 12 points. He was also more active as a vocal leader for the team, Calipari said, which the sophomore had often struggled to do this season. Harrow said when Calipari would tell him to scream out at his team, he would do it even if he didn't know what to scream about. "I might have been saying, 'Screen, screen, screen,' and the dude wasn't even up there to screen yet, so it was just something on defense that I thought was a defensive term," Harrow said. "'Screen, screen, screen,' or something like that, and the man wasn't even screening. I was like, 'Let me just say let's go from now on.'" Martin Smith had 18 points for Lipscomb, and Stephen Hurt finished with 12 points and 11 rebounds for his first career double-double.

Deonte Alexander of the Bisons was disqualified in the second half after picking up his second technical foul. Both technicals were assessed after brief verbal exchanges with Kentucky's Nerlens Noel, one in each half. Noel also received a technical foul in the second-half exchange. Noel finished with seven points, nine rebounds, seven blocks and four steals for the Wildcats. He fouled out with 5:21 to play. The freshman has had seven blocks in two consecutive games. Though Harrow started in Wiltjer's place, the two shared a considerable amount of floor time Saturday. With Wiltjer's stroke working, Harrow said it made his job much easier. "Either they're going to guard him and it gives me a open lane, or they're going to commit to me and all I've got to do is pass it right to him and I know he's going to knock down the shot," Harrow said. "I knew he was going to have a good shooting day, too, because he was doing good in practice and knocking down shots all week."

Lady Cols coast past Calloway

■ Henderson Co. starts slowly, then surges to 69-41 win

By Kevin Patton

Even a 31-minute delay for a fire alarm did little to derail Henderson County's surge from a slow start in Saturday afternoon's 69-41 victory over Calloway County. The 7-0 Lady Colonels fell behind 15-12 but had just finished off a 13-2 run to move in front when a fire alarm forced the evacuation of Henderson County High School with 1:13 to go in the first half. A faulty sensor in the gym was to blame for the alarm, athletic director Vivian Tomblin said. Following the delay, the Lady Colonels continued with what they were doing. They took a 30-21 lead into halftime then outscored the Lady Lakers 15-4 to start the third quarter. A 53-point blowout by Henderson County in the junior varsity game might have influenced the varsity team's slow start, Lady Colonel coach Jeff Haile said. "We didn't come out sharp. They watched that JV game, but we can't take people lightly." Calloway County (5-3) beat Henderson County's press early on for layups and also got behind the defense for easy baskets in the half-court. "They're big and physical. They try to pin you down," Haile said. "We were caught off guard a little bit early in the game. We weren't getting in our spots in the press and they were beating us down the floor. That's something that's happened in the last three or four games and is something we have to continue to work on." The Lady Colonels took the lead for good at the 6:14 mark of the second quarter on back-to-back putbacks by Maci Brown and McKayla Gilbert. "From the middle of the second quarter and all of the second half, we picked up our intensity and played a lot better on defense especially. We moved the ball better and gave up a pretty good shot for a better shot a lot of times," Haile said. After forcing Calloway County into 10 turnovers in the first half, Henderson County's defense picked up the pace in the second half registering 18 turnovers in the final two periods. Freshman guard Aysia Jacobs saw her first significant playing time of the season and scored four points off the bench. The varsity playing time would have come earlier for Jacobs, Haile said, but she missed a week of practice with inner ear problems. "She had been playing well in JV games and in practice," he said. "She played well today. It helps us at our guard position and gives us another player out there." Gilbert, who finished with 12 points and four rebounds, continues to provide a boost off the bench to the Lady Colonels' play inside. "Each game she seems to get better and a little more comfortable in there. The main thing we want from her is to battle for rebounds and she's finishing better around the basket now," Haile said. Senior forward Ellie Fruit, who is averaging 22.1 points per game, surpassed the 20-point mark for the fifth time this season with 21. She and Brown also led the team with six rebounds apiece. Despite foul trouble, Kacie Wallace added 13 points. Summer Simmons topped the Lady Lakers with 17 points, while Darien Maness added 10 points with a team-high seven rebounds. Henderson County can focus on practice time over a 12-day break before play in the Owensboro Holiday Classic. "Even though we're 7-0, there's a ton of things we need to work on the next couple of weeks," Haile said. Henderson County won the junior varsity game 58-5 to improve to 6-0. Jailyn Brantley led the Lady Colonels with 11 points, while Callie Francis added 10. HENDERSON 69, CALLOWAY 41

Cols hit eight 3-point shots to top Lincoln

Gleaner staff

COLUMBIA, Ky. — Henderson County hit eight 3-pointers, including four off the bench by Corey Sanners, and beat Lincoln County 63-45 Saturday in the McDonald's Hoopin' It Up Classic at Adair County. Sanners led a balanced scoring attack for the Colonels (7-1) with 14 points, while David Simmons added 11. Lincoln County (1-5) scored just 21 points in the second half as the Colonels pulled away. "In the second half, our guys took in personally the way they played man-to-man defense. We challenged them to run them off the 3-point line," Henderson County coach Tyler Smithhart said. "We took it up a notch on defense in the second half." Henderson County's next game will be Thursday against Calloway County in Ohio County's holiday tournament.

Cardinals rally for 87-78 win over old rival Memphis

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Rick Pitino believes an old rival gave his sixth-ranked Cardinals just the kind of early road test they needed. Luckily for them, Chane Behanan helped make sure Louisville took the victory. Behanan scored 16 of his 22 points in the second half, and the Cardinals rallied from 16 points down in the first half to beat Memphis 87-78 on Saturday.

"This was as good a crowd as we've played in in quite some time," Pitino said of a near sellout with 18,392 in FedExForum. "It will rival any Big East crowd, certainly. Great arena, great fans, great crowd. We had to battle all the elements to get a victory and we did." Louisville (9-1) trailed 25-9 in the first half before pulling out its fourth straight win in this rivalry with a team the Cardinals have played in three conferences. The Big East will be the fourth when Memphis joins in July. But the Cardinals hadn't played since beating Missouri-Kansas City on Dec. 8, and they seemed to forget all the plays they worked on in practice since then passing the ball to the 6-foot-6 Behanan near the basket. Behanan took only two shots in the first half as Memphis led 35-28 at halftime. "It doesn't pay to work on it all week," Pitino said. "At halftime, I gave them a piece of my mind saying, 'You've got a great player here but you're ignoring him.' They got the message, and they didn't ignore him." Russ Smith scored 13 of his 19 points in the second half for Louisville even after hurting his left ankle so badly in the first half he couldn't put any weight on it as he was helped to the bench. Peyton Siva added 19 points, and Luke Hancock had 11. Behanan isn't talking to the media this semester under team discipline, but Smith said Pitino made sure they found the big sophomore in the final 20 minutes. "We made an effort to give him the rock every time possible," Smith said. Memphis (6-3) had five players foul out, helping Louisville to a huge edge at the free-throw line. The Cardinals were 38 of 46; the Tigers 14 of 20. Joe Jackson led Memphis with 23 points and eight assists, and Tarik Black added 21 points.

Interim coach Bruce Arians has surprising Colts clicking

By Michael Marot
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Bruce Arians feels like he's living out a fantasy.

After two decades as an NFL assistant and less than 12 months after being forced out as Pittsburgh's offensive coordinator, the Colts interim coach has delivered a memorable performance in his first — and perhaps only — role as an NFL team's leading man.

He's won eight games since replacing Chuck Pagano, who is recovering from leukemia. Incredibly, Arians has Indianapolis on the verge of making the playoffs. He's guided Andrew Luck through a record-setting rookie season, has the offense clicking, the usually maligned defense believing and a forgotten special teams unit making big plays. He's even getting mentioned as a coach of the year candidate, an award no interim coach has ever won.

Within two weeks, this made-for-Hollywood script could change again when Arians gladly hands the head coaching duties back to Pagano.

"I'll get more sleep," Arians joked Wednesday before turning serious. "Look, it's been fun, and I would be lying if I said it hasn't. But the whole goal was to keep it together until Chuck came back."

Arians has done more than keep these Colts (9-4) unified, he's given them purpose and direction by keeping Pagano and his battle with leukemia in the forefront. It's true that screenwriters couldn't have conjured up more plot twists than the feature attraction in Indianapolis. This is part "Brian's Song," part "Hoosiers."

From the moment he spoke with Pagano on Sept. 30, Arians had 21 hours to adjust to the idea he was no longer just Indy's offensive coordinator. He also needed a plan to be the interim coach. It didn't take long for Arians to figure out what he needed to do.

As a prostate cancer survivor, Arians has been able to explain the challenge Pagano faced on Sept. 26 and the day-to-day grind he's had since then.

As one of pro football's top tutors of young quarterbacks, Arians refused to sacrifice precious time helping Luck, carving out extra hours to meet face to face with his star rookie.

A humble man with a simple approach to life, Arians won over the veterans with substance, kept the roughly three-dozen newcomers grounded enough to focus on football, and never let these players lose sight of their overall mission: playing well until Pagano got back on the sideline. The target date for Pagano's return is Dec. 30, Indy's regular-season finale, and a game that could decide the AFC South title.

Outsiders aren't the only ones raving about Arians' performance.

Linebacker Robert Mathis, a converted Pro Bowl defensive end, calls Arians the team's MVP. Four-time Super Bowl-winning kicker Adam Vinatieri credits Arians with providing a season's worth of mental and spiritual inspiration. Luck appreciates that Arians held nothing back in training camp and never let their communication diminish even when the coaching circumstances changed.

"I think he's been successful because he's really stayed true to some basic principles," first-year general manager Ryan Grigson said. "Every week, he reminds the team that we are playing for our fallen leader."

Transgender player keeps head high

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — The women's basketball team at Mission College expected the bleachers to be full and the hecklers ready when its newest player made her home court debut.

In the days leading up to the game, people had plenty to say about 6-foot-6-inch, 220-pound Gabrielle Ludwig, who joined the Lady Saints as a mid-season walk-on and became, according to advocates, the first transsexual to play college hoops as both a man and a woman.

Coach Corey Cafferata worried the outside noise was getting to his players, particularly the 50-year-old Ludwig.

A pair of ESPN radio hosts had laughed at her looks, referring to her as "it." And online threats and anonymous calls prompted the two-year college to assign the Navy veteran of Operation Desert Storm a safer parking space next to the gym and two police guards.

Last week, Ludwig gathered her 10 teammates at practice and offered to quit. This was their time to shine, she told the group of 18-, 19- and 20-year-olds. She didn't want to be a distraction for the team. The other women said if Ludwig, whom they nicknamed "Big Sexy" and "Princess," didn't play, they wouldn't either.

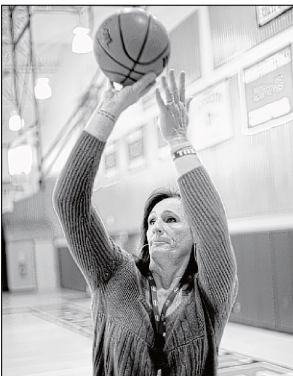

A lifelong basketball lover, Ludwig has been helping coach and working out with the Saints since the beginning of the school year, but she only received conference clearance to compete on the last day of November. She took the court as No. 42 the next day, scoring three points on four free throws in about seven minutes of play. Last weekend, during her first home game, she scored eight points in 11 minutes.

"I got exactly what I always wanted, just to fit in and be normal like everyone else," Ludwig said.

Indiana prep team wins 107-2

INDIANAPOLIS — An Indiana high school girls basketball team routed an opponent 107-2 this week, prompting an official with the state prep sports association to say he never wants to see anything so one-sided again.

coach Larry Winters told the Indianapolis Star there was no effort to embarrass Arlington or run up the score during Tuesday's game. He says he played all nine of his players and didn't stop shooting because "that would have been more embarrassing" to Arlington, whose only points came on a free throw in the second quarter and another in the third.

First-year Arlington coach Ebony Jackson says she was disappointed with how Bloomington South (8-1) handled the game. Her team is 0-6 this year and has lost 23 straight games.

1972 Dolphins celebrate perfection

MIAMI — Don Shula had the 1972 Miami Dolphins over to his house for dinner Thursday to help celebrate the 40th anniversary of their perfect season.

"It's going to be a wonderful evening for me to have them walk through the door," the Pro Football Hall of Fame coach said beforehand. "I can check them in and weigh them in and have them run gasers and the 12-minute run, and make life miserable for them remembering what I put them through."

The dinner is among the festivities this week for the only unbeaten, untied team in NFL history, which will be honored at the Dolphins game against Jacksonville today.

"I never thought it would happen that we would be the only team," Hall of Fame guard Larry Little said. "Then 10 years went by, 20 years went by, 30 years went by. Now 40 years. And maybe 10 years from now, we'll all be in wheelchairs and it still may not have happened."

Wire reports

RAINIER EHRHARDT/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Atlanta Falcons quarterback Matt Ryan (2) is sacked by the Carolina Panthers' Charles Johnson (95) during the first half of their NFL game in Charlotte, N.C., last Sunday. The Falcons face the New York Giants today in one of several important matchups.

Postseason preview?

■ Week 15 looks like playoffs with matchups between contenders

By Barry Wilner

Associated Press

This might be even better than the playoffs.

Week 15 sure looks like a playoff round with so many matchups between contenders. From Foxborough to Baltimore to Atlanta, from Chicago to Houston to Dallas. Maybe even throw in St. Louis. It feels like the postseason because of the importance of those games for all involved.

"I think for us it's an important football game because we've got a lot of stuff in front of us that we want to finish off with this season," said Atlanta quarterback Matt Ryan, who could have been speaking for every team still in the playoff races.

And especially for those facing opponents in the same position this weekend, including Ryan's Falcons against the NFC East-leading New York Giants.

Also, San Francisco is at AFC East winner New England, AFC West champion Denver at AFC North leader Baltimore, NFC North leader Green Bay at Chicago, Indianapolis at AFC South leader Houston, Pittsburgh at Dallas, and Minnesota at St. Louis.

■ San Francisco at New England: Six days after exposing the Texans in a prime-time rout, the Patriots take on another likely division winner with Super Bowl aspirations. Should New England, which has won 20 in a row at home in December and has not lost in the second half of the schedule in 21 games, do the same to the 49ers on Sunday night, well, nobody will doubt the Patriots have earned the favorite's role.

The Patriots, winners of seven in a row, tend to live up to such challenges.

"This week it's the 49ers," said Tom Brady, who threw for four touchdowns against Houston. "It's not the weather, it's not the rest, it's not the crowd — it's the 49ers. I think as long as you stay focused on them and you focus on what you need to do against them, then you let those other things really take care of themselves."

■ Denver at Baltimore: The AFC West champion Broncos have won eight straight as their defense has become staunch. That gives them an edge in that area over the sputtering Ravens, which says a lot in itself considering how good Baltimore's defense usually is.

Then there's the comfort level Peyton Manning has gained with his playmates on offense. In contrast, the Ravens fired offensive coordinator Cam Cameron this week, replacing him with Jim Caldwell — coincidentally, Manning's last coach in Indianapolis before the four-time MVP headed to Denver.

■ N.Y. Giants at Atlanta: Although the Falcons own the NFC South and have the best record in the conference, they've looked vulnerable for more than a month. One of two undefeated teams at home — Seattle is the other — Atlanta needs to re-establish some momentum after a weak performance in a loss at Carolina.

The Giants also have been up and down and have only a one-game lead in the NFC East, where Dallas and Washington have better divisional records.

■ Green Bay at Chicago: A Packers victory ends the suspense in the NFC North, and the way Chicago is hurting, the Bears might need to start worrying about just getting into the postseason if they fall at Soldier Field.

The latest injury is to kicker Robbie Gould's left calf, and he is done for the season; veteran Olindo Mare was signed this week.

Green Bay is beginning to show some balance on both sides of the ball, yet Aaron Rodgers has not had a huge game in a while. That could be coming against the limping Bears in the 186th match of the NFL's longest series.

■ Indianapolis at Houston: The division race is over if the Texans win, and they also are very aware that another loss could force them to return to Foxborough in the playoffs.

Indianapolis has put together quite a story, going from the NFL's worst in 2012 to a victory of at least an AFC wild-card spot. Win out and the Colts, led by top overall draft choice QB Andrew Luck, take the South crown. Win here and they are in the playoffs.

Houston needs to rediscover the defensive power and stinginess that helped it surge to the top of the standings. Indy is 3-3 on the road, but the victims weren't in the Texans' class: the Titans, Jaguars and Lions.

■ Pittsburgh at Dallas: Both clubs are alive in division races, but more realistic might be pursuing a wild card. The loser here will be at a big disadvantage in that chase — unless the other contenders also lose, which is highly possible in this wide-open scramble.

For the Steelers, a more comfortable Ben Roethlisberger in his second game back from shoulder and rib problems is a must.

■ Minnesota at St. Louis: Adrian Peterson has his eyes on more than reaching 2,000 yards rushing in his comeback from major left knee surgery 11 months ago. He's thinking about Eric Dickerson's league record of 2,105 set in 1984.

The Rams have won three in a row and this is the first of three games against other wild-card chasers; they finish at Tampa Bay and Seattle.

■ Seattle vs. Buffalo: Coming off its biggest road win two weeks ago at Chicago, the Seahawks should have no fear of visiting the Bills and dealing with the Western New York elements ... oh, wait.

Not much home-field advantage in the Toronto dome for the Bills, who are just 3-3 at Orchard Park, anyway.

■ Washington at Cleveland: A pair of teams on a roll, with Washington chasing the postseason and Cleveland perhaps saving coach Pat Shurmur's job with its perseverance and hard work despite all the earlier defeats.

So much of the Redskins' fortunes depend on how quickly QB Robert Griffin III recovers from the knee sprain he suffered last Sunday. The sensational rookie was replaced by another freshman, Kirk Cousins, who completed the rally to beat the Ravens.

■ Tampa Bay at New Orleans: Look for lots of points at the Superdome. Only the Giants have scored more in the NFC than the Bucs' 354 and the Saints' 348.

With playoff hopes squashed, New Orleans' players might be looking to increase their individual numbers against a defense that fell apart against Philly late last week.

■ N.Y. Jets at Tennessee: Somehow, even with all the turmoil surrounding Mark Sanchez, Rex Ryan and the Jets, they remain in playoff contention.

The Titans have lost three straight and five of six, stamping them among the biggest disappointments of the season.

■ Jacksonville at Miami: North Florida vs. South Florida. This might be more interesting if it was the Seminoles against the Hurricanes.

■ Carolina at San Diego: It's become fun to watch Cam Newton again. What he did last week against Atlanta surely has been noticed by a San Diego team that snapped a four-game slide with a shocker at Pittsburgh.

■ Detroit at Arizona: Two of the biggest flops in the league collide. It's impossible to believe the Cardinals can be any more wretched than in that 58-0 debacle last Sunday at Seattle.

■ Kansas City at Oakland: Last time these bitter rivals met, the Raiders were 2-4 and the Chiefs 1-5. Not much has changed, a sad commentary considering where these franchises once were.

Butler stuns No. 1 Indiana

■ Hoosiers tumble 88-86 in overtime

Wire reports

Walk-on Alex Barlow drove in for a spinning 6-foot jumper with 2.4 seconds left in overtime and Butler toppled Indiana 88-86 Saturday in the Crossroads Classic for their first victory over a top-ranked team in school history.

Barlow, a sophomore, had scored only 12 points this season and just 18 in his college career.

But the Bulldogs (8-2) put the ball in his hands with 19.3 seconds to go. As the clock ran down, Barlow slowly moved toward the lane, then took a couple of dribbles, stopped and put up a shot that hit the back of the rim and dropped in.

The Hoosiers (9-1) called timeout to set up a play but could only muster a half-court heave from Jordan Hulls. The shot went left of the basket and missed everything, ending one of this season's best college games.

Rotnei Clarke scored 19 points for Butler and Roosevelt Jones had 16 points, 12 rebounds and six assists before fouling out with 2:03 left in regulation.

The Hoosiers were led

Indiana forward Will Sheehey (0) comes down on Butler forward Erik Fromm (4) and guard Kellen Dunham as they go for a rebound in front of Indiana forward Cody Zeller during the second half of their game in Indianapolis on Saturday. Butler defeated No. 1 Indiana 88-86 in overtime.

by Cody Zeller, who had 18 points, including a layup to tie the score at 86 with 19.3 seconds left in overtime. Victor Oladipo also had 18 points.

■ Evansville 80, Alabama State 67: Colt Ryan scored 24 points, including three 3-pointers, to help Evansville improve to 3-0 all-time against Alabama State with an 80-67 victory.

Ryan, a senior, was 3 of 6 from behind the arc. Ryan Sawvell added 11 points, Jaylon Moore had 10 and Troy Taylor scored just two points but pulled down a game-high nine rebounds for the Purple Aces (6-4), who gave up the first basket of the game but never trailed after that. Evansville led by as many as 24 in the second half.

Phillip Crawford scored 22 points on 8-of-12 shooting to lead the Hornets (1-8), and Shawntez Patterson chipped in 13 points.

■ Notre Dame 81, Purdue 68: Jack Cooley had 18 points and nine rebounds to lead Notre Dame to its seventh straight victory with a win over Purdue in the Crossroads Classic.

■ Ohio St. 90, UNC Asheville 72: Sam Thompson scored a career-high 18 points and Ohio State made the most of an opportunity to get out and run to beat UNC Asheville.

■ Syracuse 85, Canisius 61: James Southerland broke out of a slump with 21 points and Brandon Triche had 19 to lead Syracuse over Canisius in the Gotham Classic.

■ Cincinnati 72, Marshall 56: Cashmere Wright scored 14 points and Cincinnati overcame an off game from top scorer Sean Kilpatrick to beat Marshall.

■ Georgetown 81, Western Carolina 68: Greg Whittington scored a career-high 25 points to lead Georgetown to a win over Western Carolina.

■ North Carolina 93, East Carolina 87: James Michael McAdoo scored 19 points to help North Carolina hold off East Carolina.

■ Kansas 89, Belmont 60: Ben McLemore and Travis Releford scored 17 points each, Jeff Withey had 14 points and blocked five shots, and ninth-ranked Kansas cruised to a victory over Belmont.

Third-seed Texas sweeps Oregon for volleyball title

By Gary Graves

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — Bailey Webster had 14 kills, Haley Eckerman added 12 and third-seeded Texas swept Oregon on Saturday night for its first NCAA volleyball championship since 1988.

The Longhorns won 25-11, 26-24, 25-19.

Texas (29-4) has been a recent regular at volleyball's Final Four, making its fourth appearance in five years and playing in its first title game since 2009, when the Longhorns lost to Penn State in five sets after leading 2-0.

This time they took care of business for their second title in four tries, recording their third sweep in the past four matches.

Webster, a first-team AVCA All-American, helped the Longhorns on defense as well with four blocks and keyed a second-set comeback. She was the tournament's most outstanding player.

Liz Brenner and Katherine Fischer each had 13 kills for fifth-seeded Oregon (30-5).

A crowd of 16,448 fans attended the game, the second-largest for an NCAA tournament final.

Arizona rallies for wild 49-48 win over Nevada

Wire reports

Matt Scott threw two touchdown passes in the final 46 seconds and the college bowl season started with a wild one when Arizona rallied to beat Nevada 49-48 on Saturday in the New Mexico Bowl.

Overcoming a slow start and three big turnovers, Arizona (8-5) recovered an onside kick in the last minute, setting up Scott's 2-yard toss to Tyler Slavin with 19 seconds left.

The nation's rushing leader, Ka'Deem Carey, gained 172 yards for the Wildcats and but fell short of becoming only the 16th running back in NCAA history to reach 2,000 yards in a season.

■ Utah State 41, Toledo 15: Kerwynn Williams ran for 235 yards and three touchdowns and No. 18 Utah State won a bowl game for the first time in nearly 20 years, beating Toledo in the Famous Idaho Potato Bowl.

■ Sam Houston State 45, Eastern Washington 42: Quarterback Brian Bell ran for two touchdowns and threw for another and Sam Houston State raced to a 35-0 halftime lead but barely held on to beat second-seeded Eastern Washington 45-42 Saturday, earning a trip to the Football Championship Subdivision title game.

■ North Dakota State 23, Georgia Southern 20: Brock Jensen scored on a 5-yard quarterback draw with 3 minutes left to rally North Dakota State to a 23-20 victory over Georgia Southern Friday night in the FCS semifinals.

■ Valdosta State 35, Winston-Salem State 7: Matt Pierce returned the opening kickoff 96 yards for a touchdown and freshman Cedric O'Neal ran for 140 yards and a score to lead Valdosta State to a 35-7 victory over Winston-Salem State on Saturday in the Division II championship game.

Love III and son Dru take the lead in Challenge

Wire reports

Davis Love III and son Dru birdied five of the last six holes for a 12-under 60 in the Father-Son Challenge scramble event, giving them a one-stroke lead Saturday after the first round.

Dru Love is an Alabama freshman after winning five Georgia state titles in high school.

Mark O'Meara and son Shaun, and Fred and Taylor Funk were a stroke back, and Larry Nelson, who won the last two Father-Sons in 2007-08 before the event went on a three-year hiatus, was two shots back with son Josh.

■ Australian PGA: Australia's Daniel Popovic shot a 3-under 69 to take a two-stroke lead into the final round of the Australian PGA Championship.

■ Alfred Dunhill: South African star Charl Schwartzel shot an 8-under 64 to take a 10-stroke lead after the third round.

■ Royal Trophy: India's Jeev Milkha Singh saved par on the final hole to earn a half-point and help Asia cut Europe's lead to one in the Royal Trophy.

■ Johor Open: Sweden's Daniel Chopra shot a 6-under 66 to take a one-stroke lead after the second round of the Johor Open.

Movie capsules

Here are capsule descriptions of some of the more current films showing at local theaters:

Opening locally

“The Hobbit: An Unexpected Journey:” A curious Hobbit, Bilbo Baggins, journeys to the Lonely Mountain with a vigorous group of Dwarves to reclaim a treasure stolen from them by the dragon Smaug. Cast: Martin Freeman, Ian McKellen, Richard Armitage. Rating: PG-13.

Recent Releases

“The Collection:” A man who escapes from the vicious grips of the serial killer known as “The Collector” is blackmailed to rescue an innocent girl from the killer’s bobby-trapped warehouse. Cast: Josh Stewart, Emma Fitzpatrick, Christopher McDonald. Rating: R (for strong bloody violence, grisly images, language and brief nudity).

“Flight:” An airplane pilot saves a flight from crashing, but an investigation into the malfunctions reveals something troubling.

Cast: Nadine Velazquez, Denzel Washington, Carter Cabassa.

Rating: R (for drug and alcohol abuse, language, sexuality/nudity and an intense action sequence).

Hayek, Henry Winkler. Rating: PG.

“Killing Them Softly:” Jackie Cogan is an enforcer hired to restore order after three dumb guys rob a Mob protected card game, causing the local criminal economy to collapse. Cast: Brad Pitt, Ray Liotta, Richard Jenkins. Rating: R (for violence, sexual references, pervasive language and some drug use).

“Life of Pi:” A young man who survives a disaster at sea is hurtled into an epic journey of adventure and discovery. While cast away, he forms an unexpected connection with another survivor — a fearsome Bengal tiger.

Cast: Surag Sharma, Irrfan Khan, Adil Hussain. Rating: PG (for emotional thematic content throughout, and some scary action sequences and peril).

“Lincoln:” As the Civil War continues to rage, America’s president struggles with continuing carnage on the battlefield as he fights with many inside his own cabinet on the decision to emancipate the slaves.

Cast: Daniel Day-Lewis, Sally Field, David Strathairn. Rating: PG-13 (for an intense scene of war violence, some images of carnage and brief strong language).

“The Man With The Iron Fists:”

On the hunt for a fabled treasure of gold, a band of warriors, assassins and a rogue British soldier descend upon a village in feudal China, where a humble blacksmith looks to defend himself and his fellow villagers. Cast: Russell Crowe, Cung Lee, Lucy Liu. Rating: R (for bloody violence, strong sexuality, language and brief drug use).

“Playing for Keeps:” A former sports star who’s fallen on hard times starts coaching his son’s soccer team as a way to get his life together. His attempts to become an adult are met with challenges from the attractive soccer moms who pursue him at every turn.

Cast: Gerard Butler, Jessica Biel, Dennis Quaid. Rating: PG-13 (for some sexual situations, language and a brief intense image).

“Pitch Perfect:” A college freshman is cajoled into joining The Bellas, her school’s all-girls singing group, and they take on their male rivals in a campus competition.

Cast: Anna Kendrick, Brittany Snow, Rebel Wilson. Rating: PG-13 (for sexual material, language and drug references).

“Red Dawn:” A group of teenagers look to save their town from an invasion of North Korean soldiers.

Cast: Chris Hemsworth, Isabel Lucas, Josh Hutcherson. Rating: PG-13 (for sequences of intense war violence and action, and for language).

Inadequate equipment blamed in tree stand falls

By Emily Campion
Journal & Courier

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — For many, hunting is therapeutic — the silence of the woods, the scurrying of Indiana wildlife and the adrenaline of shooting a deer.

Fred Hettinger of Lafayette said he enjoys hunting because it's a way to put aside the stress of everyday life. He still feels this way despite shattering his leg two years ago after he fell 21 feet from his tree stand while hunting in Carroll County.

This year's urban deer hunting season began Sept. 15, with archery shortly following and firearms season starting almost three weeks ago. Since the opening of hunting season, at least six tree stand falls have been reported throughout Indiana, though not all have resulted in injuries as serious as Hettinger's.

The primary cause is a lack of, or damage to, fall-restraint harnesses, said Matt Tholen, a conservation officer with the Indiana Department of Natural Resources and a hunter of 15 years.

"In my 10 years (as a conservation officer), we haven't had this many tree stand accidents this early in the season, this quickly here in our district," Tholen said. "People aren't wearing restraints and they aren't checking their equipment."

When hunters leave their tree stands up year-round, they are subject to weather and fauna.

"Wood rots, straps break," said Tholen, assigning squirrels as a culprit for some damaged straps.

In Hettinger's case, he was wearing a harness, but it wasn't connected to the tree at the time of the fall. Hettinger, who's hunted for 41 years, said he'd detached his harness to climb down to retrieve a deer he had shot.

"Unfortunately, in the transfer going from the stand to the climbing stick, a limb broke, which was carrying my weight, and I fell," Hettinger said. "God was good to me. I didn't get more seriously injured or killed."

Still, his injury required two surgeries, rehabilitation and a total of seven weeks away from his job at Tate & Lyle.

As for the deer Hettinger shot, his son, Jason, and a friend retrieved it as paramedics stabilized him.

Now, Hettinger and his son are fastidious about lifeline use.

A lifeline, said Eric Osborn, a hunter and a salesman at Gander Mountain, connects the safety harness to the tree and keeps hunters attached to the tree the entire time they are climbing. Lifelines are not required, but are encouraged.

At Gander Mountain, the average climbing or hang-on tree stand costs $200-300, while safety harnesses cost about $100 and a lifeline costs about $40.

"(Tree stands) all come with safety harnesses in them. They are required by law," Osborn said.

Hunter sets state record during recent bear hunt

Gleaner staff

FRANKFORT — Kentucky hunters harvested 11 bears during the recently concluded bear season that ran Dec. 8-9. One of the bears broke the state record.

Doug Adkins of Jenkins, Ky., took a 410-pound male bear in Letcher County, besting the previous record bear of 350 pounds set last year by Neil Perkins of Hallie, Ky.

"The 410-pound bear is the field dressed weight," said Steve Dobey, bear program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "The live weight would have likely exceeded 450 pounds."

All of the bears taken during this season came from Harlan or Letcher counties. The highest bear densities in Kentucky lie along Pine Mountain, which stretches from the Breaks of the Russell Fork of the Big Sandy River in Pike County through Letcher and Harlan counties.

Hunters purchased 359 permits for the 2012 hunt, down from 484 permits last year. Males made up nine of the 11 harvested bears and 13 of the 17 total bears taken since bear hunting began again in Kentucky in 2009. This is by design.

"Having the hunt in mid-December helps prevent excessive harvest of female bears," Dobey said. "Most female bears are in their dens by this time of year."

This year's total harvest of 11 bears exceeds by one the number of bears established as an annual quota by the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Commission. Hunters may take only 10 bears per season, of which no more than five shall be females. "If the quota is not met in a single day, the following day is open until sundown regardless," said Dobey. "We have the season structured in the event this happened. The baseline quota will prevent over harvest of bears."

This hunt was scheduled to continue through Dec. 10, but closed Dec. 9 after hunters reached the bear quota for the season. The 2012 season marks the first time hunters met the quota of bears in the four-year history of modern bear hunting in Kentucky.

By meeting the quota for the season, the bear quota hunt with dogs scheduled for Dec. 17-21 is now a chase-only season in which no harvest of bears shall occur. Harvest of bears would only occur if the bear quota was not met during the regular bear season. The scheduled late bear chase season with dogs will last from Dec. 24-28. Harvest of bears is not allowed during this chase season.

Public can view sandhill cranes

LUCAS, Ky. — Barren River Lake State Resort Park in south-central Kentucky expects to be a stopover point again for sandhill cranes as they return to the north later this winter and is offering a couple of weekend sessions to view the cranes.

The Kentucky Department of Parks says thousands of sandhill cranes stop at Barren River Lake each year, taking advantage of the lake's exposed mud flats for a place to rest. Plenty of food is available in nearby farmland and wet meadows.

The Nature Watch Weekends are set for Jan. 25 to 27 and Feb. 8 to 10.

Agreement aims to protect endangered Indiana bats

LOUISVILLE — The Kentucky Division of Forestry has signed an agreement with federal officials that will help protect the endangered Indiana bat.

The Courier-Journal reports the conservation memorandum of agreement aims to aid the survival and recovery of the creature through actions such as improving its habitat, focusing land purchases on areas where the bat is known to live and maintaining current habitat in state forests.

Lee Andrews, who supervises the Kentucky Field Office for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, says the agreement will assure that state forest lands will be managed in a way that is beneficial to the bat.

Indiana bats have been encountered in five of the state's 10 forests — Big Rivers, Green River, Kentenia, Kentucky Ridge, and Tygarts State Forests.

Illinois deer harvest rises about 2,500

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — The Illinois Department of Natural Resources says hunters harvested more than 99,000 deer during this year's firearm season.

The preliminary total of 99,324 deer is about 2,500 more than last year.

Illinois' firearm season was held Nov. 16-18 and Nov. 29-Dec. 2. IDNR Forest Wildlife Program Manager Paul Shelton says hunters likely benefited from the split season this year because the weather was different.

He says the first week of hunting took place in warm, spring-like conditions.

CHAMBER BOWLING NIGHT AT ECHO LANES

A team from Audubon Metals rolled a two-game combined total of 1267 to win the overall title at the 2012 Henderson-Henderson County Chamber of Commerce Bowling Night at Echo Lanes on Nov. 20. Team members were, in picture from left, Jimmy Garren, Keith Schultheis, Marty Wohadlo, Brian Hawkes, and Rob Harris. Competing with a team from Teknor, Stan Saalwaechter had the best regular bowling individual score with a 225. Kim Linney, a member of a team from JD Byrider, had the top funky bowling individual score with a 126. A team from Water's Edge Church captured the beat-up bowling pin trophy awarded to the squad with the lowest combined score with a total of 625.

The event, now in its third year, was sold out and more than 100 chamber members enjoyed the festivities. Thanks to all the participants, Echo Lanes owner Bob Harper and his staff, our sponsors and door prize providers for a great evening of fun, fellowship and networking.

Seven are leaving Big East to build basketball conference

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

The seven Big East schools that don't play FBS football are leaving behind the conference many of them founded to build a league focused on basketball.

The presidents of the seven schools made the announcement Saturday.

"Earlier today we voted unanimously to pursue an orderly evolution to a foundation of basketball schools that honors the history and tradition on which the Big East was established," the statement said. "Under the context of conference realignment, we believe pursuing a new basketball framework that builds on this tradition of excellence and competition is the best way forward."

The seven basketball schools leaving are: Georgetown, St. John's, Villanova, DePaul, Marquette, Seton Hall and Providence. Georgetown, St. John's, Seton Hall and Providence helped form the Big East, which started playing basketball in 1979. Villanova joined in 1980. The Big East didn't begin playing football until 1991.

The statement from the seven Catholic schools gave no details about their plans, such as when they want to depart and whether they will attempt to keep the name Big East.

Big East bylaws require departing members give the conference 27 months' notice, but league has negotiated early departures with several schools over the past year. Big East rules do allow schools to leave as a group without being obligated to pay exit fees.

There are also millions of dollars in NCAA basketball tournament money and exit fees collected from recently departed members that will need to be divvied up.

"The basketball institutions have notified us that they plan to withdraw from the Big East," commissioner Mike Aresco said in a statement. "The membership recognizes their contributions over the long distinguished history of the Big East. The 13 members of the conference are confident and united regarding our collective future."

The latest hit to the Big East leaves Connecticut, also a founding member of the league, Cincinnati, Temple and South Florida—the four current members with FBS football programs—as the only schools currently in the Big East that are scheduled to be there beyond next season.

The Big East is still lined up to have a 12-team football conference next season with six new members joining, including Boise State and San Diego State for football only. Rutgers and Louisville, which both announced intentions to leave the Big East, are still expected to compete in the conference next year.

Notre Dame, which is moving to the Atlantic Coast Conference, is also expected to continue competing in the Big East next season in all sports but football and hockey.

‘Christmas miracle’

Kind strangers, devoted pet-sitter help elderly dog find his way home after being lost since late September

From the moment that 15-year-old Chazz wandered out of his yard in late September, the odds were stacked against him of ever returning home. The elderly Papillon not only is a tiny 3 pounds, he's also nearly blind, totally deaf and has no teeth. But thanks to the perseverance of his dog-sitter and the kindness of numerous other animal-loving Henderson residents, Chazz is now back at his Grantwood Hills home, resting comfortably in the arms of his beloved caretaker, Patsy Campbell. "He's our Christmas miracle," said Patsy, who along with her husband, Benson, has raised Chazz since he was about 7 months old. "It's amazing he survived," Benson said.

A SAD DAY The ordeal began on Sept. 24 when Patsy noticed that Chazz hadn't appeared for breakfast as normal. She looked around the house, not finding him in his cozy bed or in any of his other favorite spots. That's when she realized that she couldn't remember seeing him since the night before when she and Benson were grilling out for dinner. It was normal for Chazz to follow them outside on occasion, but he always stuck close to the house. "He never goes anywhere. His exercise is going to the mailbox every morning to get the newspaper" with her husband, Patsy said. "A 15-year-old doesn't demand a lot of exercise." Since the last place she'd seen Chazz was outside, she walked around the neighborhood, checking with neighbors to see if anybody remembered seeing the small dog the night before or earlier that morning. "We looked everywhere around here," she said. "We didn't hear back from anybody that they'd seen him. We just thought he was gone." Complicating the situation, on that same day there was a death in Patsy's family and the Campbells had to leave immediately for North Carolina. While Benson wasn't gone as long, Patsy ended up being away for 10 days, all the while mourning not only the loss of her relative but also the loss of Chazz. "It was awful. I just dreaded coming home," Patsy said. "I didn't want to deal with that loss. Grieving hurts." Benson, a Henderson CPA, continued to check the newspaper "found dog" ads and drove around looking for him, and as soon as Patsy got home, her search resumed. "I'd look for him. I'd go to the back door and scan the back yard, though common sense and logic" told her he wasn't there. Eventually, the Campbells began to resign themselves to the fact that Chazz wasn't coming home. Patsy was convinced the dog had deliberately wandered away. "I thought his leg was bothering him and just knew that Chazz was dying and he had gone some place to die," she said. It wasn't that she wanted to accept that he was gone forever, she just knew she eventually would have to give up searching for him. "You always hope ... you always keep hoping he's alive," said Patsy, a retired therapist.

Patsy planned to plant a tree in her yard in memory of Chazz but hadn't done so yet. It was difficult to continue with the routine of life, not knowing for sure what had happened to Chazz, and feeling guilty for not being there when he was lost. The dog had always been such a companion for Patsy, even traveling with her on trips and going with her sometimes when she was teaching classes at the college or counseling patients at a local office. Even decorating the house for Christmas proved to be sad. "I started to get the Christmas decorations out and just cried and cried because Chazzy and I had decorated in the past," Patsy said. "I always said, 'Chazz, it's you and me buddy,'" she added. "He's just always been pampered and spoiled rotten."

'TOTAL DISBELIEF' Patsy's mood brightened beyond words, though, on Nov. 28 — more than two months after Chazz disappeared, when she received a phone call from Judy Hayden, their pet-sitter from All Creatures Great and Small who was checking on the house while the Campbells were in Florida for Thanksgiving. When Patsy's cell phone rang on that Wednesday afternoon, "I thought, 'why is Judy calling me about the house?'" "Judy said, 'Are you sitting down?'" "I was absolutely stunned," Patsy said when she heard that Judy had found Chazz. "It was one of those things you can't wrap your mind around it, can't take it in. It had been over two months and Chazz was still alive? That reality couldn't sink into my mind. "I said, 'Judy, take a picture of him. I've got to see him.'" One look at the photo left no doubt that Chazz had been found, though Patsy said both she and Benson initially felt "total disbelief" that the tiny pup was still alive. "I didn't think he had a prayer" after so much time had gone by since he left, Benson said. "You don't realize you get that attached to a dog, but you do." The story doesn't end here, though, as Chazz narrowly escapes yet another dire situation before making it home.

Patsy and Benson Campbell are all smiles after the return of their 15-year-old Papillon named Chazz, who spent two months in various places after wandering away from his Grantwood Hills home in late September.

Chazz sits in front of one of the Christmas trees in the Campbell residence earlier this month, less than a week after he returned from his two-month adventure.

FOUND AT LAST Exactly where Chazz spent the past two months is not totally known. Judy has been able to piece together part of his trail, with a big gap at the start. Apparently, somebody must have picked Chazz up almost immediately near his home. Then, just a short time later, he was found by a woman who saw him along U.S. 60-East. She took him to her daughter's house on Hi-Y Drive, which ironically is only a block from where Judy lives. Chazz resided there for almost two months, until he apparently escaped out the door on the Tuesday before Thanksgiving. The tiny dog made his way up to North Elm Street, where a motorist saw him walking in the middle of the street. That person, a courier for Deaconess Clinic who was headed to the medical building by the golf course, took him inside to Dr. Watkins' office, where Susan Sugg works. Susan took the dog home and she and her husband, John, placed an ad in The Gleaner. "I had seen the ad during the holidays, but because I was so busy, couldn't call," Judy said. "And, of course, I kept debating with myself over whether or not it could actually be Chazz." When Judy called the number listed in the ad, she talked to John Sugg, who described Chazz. After he directed Judy to a photo he had placed in the lost and found section of Craigslist.com, Judy knew she'd found the missing dog. By that time, the Suggs had taken Chazz to local veterinarian Lafe Nichols' office because the family already had two dogs and two cats. Judy raced to the vet's office and was reunited with her long-lost buddy, "That he was rescued by so many and survived for two months is indeed a miracle," Judy said. The tiny dog certainly is an escape artist. John Sugg noted that during the five days that Chazz was at his house, the dog "almost got away from me." John had taken Chazz outside to use the restroom and practically in the blink of an eye had

Take us home

If you want a former hunting dog for a pet, you will have plenty to choose from at the Humane Society of Henderson County. The shelter currently has at least six beagle mixes plus two more coon hounds available for adoption. "We are overrun with beagles," said shelter staffer Tricia Jeffers. Among the beagle mixes awaiting adoption are Chewy and Meaty, two tri-color females that were picked up as strays in mid-November. It's likely the dogs were previously used for hunting, but now they're ready to be pets, Jeffers said. "They're awesome companions and very kid-friendly," she said about beagles in general. More specifically, Chewy and Meaty seem to love attention and affection and also get along well with other canines. "They both are well-behaved dogs," Jeffers said. "They're just ready to go home."

Chewy, left, and Meaty, both females, are among the beagle mixes that are available for adoption at the Humane Society of Henderson County. Both have already been spayed and are available for immediate adoption. Their adoption fee is $85 each. Another friendly shelter resident is WilyKat, a 1-year-old female who was brought to the shelter with a litter of kittens.

WilyKat, a 1-year-old female, is also available for adoption at the local Humane Society. "When she came in with her kittens, she was almost feral," Jeffers said. "She's pretty laid-back now." The easy-going kitty enjoys sitting in the window and watching what's going on outside or just napping on a comfy bed. She's been at the shelter since mid-August and has already been spayed. WilyKat's adoption fee is $50. Adoption hours at the shelter are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays; 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesdays; noon to 5 p.m. Wednesdays; and 9 a.m. to noon Saturdays. The shelter will be closed on Christmas Day and New Year's Day but will be open during normal business hours on Christmas Eve and New Year's Eve. Sister's engagement doesn't have to be problem

Q: My fiancé's sister went and got engaged less than a week after he and I did! Is it totally wrong that I'm upset about this?

A: We absolutely understand where you're coming from, but your future sister-in-law isn't trying to steal your thunder.

She was probably just as surprised as you were when her fiancé proposed. And trust us: Her happy news doesn't make yours any less special.

good sport, congratulate her and try to be happy for her just like you want her to be happy for you. Believe it or not, there is room for two brides in one family.

Think of it this way: You'll always have someone to talk all things weddings with, who, unlike your friends, won't get sick of hearing about your flower and dress dilemmas. You will still be the star at your own wedding.

But if you're at all worried that her wedding will overshadow yours, we bet she may have the same fear.

So why not make the best of the situation and team up to pick dates, venues and styles that are distinct enough to ease any concerns either of you might have?

U.S. retailers will lose $8.9 billion this holiday season to shoplifting, employee theft, and vendor and distribution losses, according to a new study by the Centre for Retail Research.

The revenue loss is expected to add about $98 to each family's holiday shopping costs, according to the report by the U.K.-based think tank. The estimated $3.8 billion loss that the report attributes to general shoplifting would be a 4 percent increase compared to last year.

Citing "organized retail crime," Professor Joshua Bamfield, director of the Centre for Retail Research and author of the report, issued a statement saying the holidays are an especially busy time for shoplifters.

"Thieves take advantage of busy stores to steal high-value, high-demand goods," Bamfield said.

Meticulously planned capers by savvy crews of shoplifters are a new trend in theft, according to the Indiana Retail Council. And the costs of large-scale shoplifting ultimately are passed on to the honest shopper.

"What we're seeing now is sort of the 21st-century development in shoplifting," said Grant Monahan, president of the nonprofit trade association for retailers. "The new trend is organized retail crime, which is very serious, where groups of people are stealing from retailers. They will go in and create a distraction in the store and clean out entire shelves or take entire racks of clothing."

"These people are very clever. They know the retailer. They know how to essentially work around the system. This is a serious threat for retailers."

Monahan agreed that shoplifting costs retailers both in sheer loss of product and expenses incurred to fight theft. He noted that the shoplifting crews typically sell their stolen goods on the street as a livelihood or to finance drug habits.

Gary Sprinkle, a security manager based in Evansville, said organized retail crime is an ever-evolving enterprise taking numerous forms.

What should you do if you see someone you think is shoplifting?

Nothing unless you're sure, said Sprinkle. And even if you are, do not confront the individual or group you believe is stealing.

"You have to know for sure. And if you do, tell store management — immediately," he said.

Wedding accounts should appear in the newspaper within 12 weeks after the wedding.

Forms outlining the information that can be used in the announcements are available at the newspaper office at 455 Klutey Park Plaza or the form can be mailed or faxed to you.

They also are available at www.thegleaner.com.

The announcements can include a photograph of the bride, bride-to-be or of the couple. The Gleaner does not publish wedding announcements in the Sunday edition immediately following a Friday or Saturday wedding.

On the Table

No laughing matter

■ These fruitcakes aren’t Bundts of anyone’s jokes

By Gretchen McKay
Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

Christmas cookies are a given crowd-pleaser this time of year. But fruitcake? I’d have to be nuttier than a you-know-what to cut myself a slice of that dense holiday clunker. And I’m betting at least half of you might feel that way, too.

Fruitcake is the holiday-dessert version of cranberry sauce: you either love it, like my mom, who looks forward to getting one in the mail every year at Christmas from the cousins; or you love, love, love to make fun of it.

One guess which side of the fence I sit on.

Don’t get me wrong: Millions of pounds of fruitcake are baked, sold and shipped across the globe each year, so obviously there’s something to the classic combination of sugar, eggs, flour and candied or dried fruit. I just think there’s a better way to incorporate winter fruits into a dessert that everyone, kids included, will enjoy during the holidays.

I’m equally sure there are much better uses for the spirits some cooks “feed” their fruitcakes (just drink it, already!), and that the only good cooked raisin is the one that works its way into an oatmeal cookie.

Technically, any cake that’s flavored with fruit can be called a fruitcake. The recipes that follow can be a happy addition to your holiday table. All but one take advantage of the fresh citrus that brightens the produce section this time of year; the other marries caramelized cranberries with the lightest, most buttery cake you can imagine.

Consider them the anti-fruitcake fruitcakes.

Source: “Desserts from the Famous Loveless Cafe” by Alisa Huntsman (Artisan, 2011)

INGREDIENTS
1¾ sticks (14 tablespoons) unsalted butter, softened
1¾ cups sugar
Grated zest of 3 lemons
3 whole eggs plus 3 egg yolks
2¼ cups unbleached all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon baking soda
½ cup buttermilk
DIRECTIONS
1 Preheat oven to 350 degrees.
2 Grease 3 small loaf pans, 5-by-3-by-2 inches. Line bottoms with parchment paper and grease paper.
3 In a mixing bowl, cream the butter with the sugar and lemon zest until light and fluffy. Add whole eggs and egg yolks in 2 to 3 additions, scraping the sides of the bowl well and mixing completely after each addition. Sift flour and baking soda over the bowl, pour in buttermilk and fold together by hand. Divide batter among the loaf pans.

4 Bake for about 45 minutes, or until toothpick or cake tester inserted in center of cake comes out clean. Let cakes stand in their pans for about 5 minutes. Turn them out on a wire rack, peel off paper and let cool completely before slicing.

COOK’S NOTE: If you don’t have mini loaf pans, a regular-sized pan will work, but you’ll have to bake it a bit longer. I used a pullman loaf pan with great success, but was careful to cover the top with foil during the last 15 minutes of baking so it didn’t get too brown.

CRANBERRY UP-SIDE-DOWN CAKE

Serves 12.
Source: “Fine Cooking In Season: Your Guide to Choosing & Preparing the Season’s Best” (Taunton Press, 2011)

INGREDIENTS
1 cup (2 sticks) very soft unsalted butter, divided, plus more for pan
1 cup very firmly packed light brown sugar
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 cups cranberries, fresh or frozen (thawed, rinsed and dried), at room temperature
1 cup granulated sugar
1 large egg yolk, at room temperature
2 large eggs, at room temperature
¾ cup sour cream, at room temperature
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
½ teaspoon salt
7 ounces (13¼ cups) cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon baking soda
DIRECTIONS
1 Position rack in the lower third of oven and heat to 350 degrees. Lightly butter bottom and sides of a 9-inch round cake pan with sides at least 2½ inches high. (A springform pan will work; set it on a foil-lined baking sheet to catch any leaks.)
2 Put ½ stick butter (4 tablespoons) in the buttered pan. Put pan in oven until butter melts, about 5 minutes. Remove pan from oven and stir in brown sugar and cinnamon until well-combined. Spread brown-sugar mixture evenly over bottom of pan and spread cranberries evenly over the sugar.

3 Put remaining 1½ sticks (12 tablespoons) butter in a medium bowl. Using a wooden spoon, cream butter with the granulated sugar and egg yolk until blended, about 20 seconds. Switch to a whisk and stir in eggs 1 at a time. Whisk until batter is smooth and sugar begins to dissolve, about 30 seconds. Whisk in sour cream, vanilla and salt. Sift cake flour, baking powder and baking soda directly into the batter. Using whisk, combine ingredients until mixture is smooth and free of lumps.

4 Spread batter evenly over cranberry mixture in the cake pan. Bake until center of cake springs back when gently touched and a skewer inserted in the center comes out with only moist crumbs clinging to it, 50 to 65 minutes. Set pan on a rack to cool for 5 to 10 minutes (the cranberry syrup in the bottom of pan will be too thick if you wait longer). Run a knife between cake and sides of the pan. Invert cake onto a serving plate and remove the pan. Let cool for at least another 15 minutes before serving. This cake is best served warm and fresh.

TANGERINE CAKE WITH CITRUS GLAZE

Source: Everyday Food, December 2011

INGREDIENTS
3 cups all-purpose flour (spooned and leveled), plus more for pan
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon fine salt
1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter, room temperature, plus more for pan
2 cups granulated sugar
6 large eggs
2 tablespoons finely grated tangerine zest, plus 1/2 cup tangerine juice (from 4 or 5 tangerines)
2 tablespoons orange-flavored liqueur, such as Grand Marnier
¾ cup low-fat plain yogurt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

FOR GLAZE
1½ cups confectioners’ sugar
3 tablespoons tangerine juice (from 2 tangerines)
DIRECTIONS
1 Preheat oven to 350 degrees.
2 Butter and flour a 12-cup Bundt cake pan. In a medium bowl, whisk together flour, baking soda and salt.
3 In a large bowl using an electric mixer, beat butter and granulated sugar until light and fluffy, 5 minutes. Add eggs, 1 at a time, beating well after each addition. Beat in tangerine zest and juice and liqueur. With mixer on low, add flour mixture in 3 additions, alternating with 2 additions yogurt, and beat to combine; beat in vanilla. Transfer batter to pan, smooth top, and firmly tap pan on a flat surface to remove air bubbles.
4 Bake until a toothpick inserted in center of cake comes out clean, 55 to 60 minutes. Let cool in pan on a wire rack, 30 minutes. Invert cake onto rack set in a rimmed baking sheet and let cool completely. (With a serrated knife, trim cake to sit flat, if necessary.)
5 Make glaze by whisking together confectioners’ sugar and tangerine juice until smooth. Spoon glaze evenly over cake and let set 1 hour.

COOK’S NOTE: To help free the Bundt cake from its pan while keeping the pretty details intact, be sure to grease and flour every single nook and cranny, and allow the cake to cool for at least 30 minutes before flipping.

CITRUS CHIFFON CAKE

Makes 16 servings.

INGREDIENTS
2¼ cups cake flour (not self-rising)
1½ cups granulated sugar, divided
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup fresh orange juice
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
½ cup vegetable oil
5 large eggs, separated, plus 2 large egg whites
1 tablespoon freshly grated orange peel
1 teaspoon freshly grated lemon peel
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
FOR GLAZE
1 cup confectioners’ sugar
1 teaspoon freshly grated lemon peel
¼ teaspoon vanilla extract
5 teaspoons orange juice
DIRECTIONS
1 Preheat oven to 325 degrees.
2 In a large bowl, with wire whisk, stir flour, 1 cup granulated sugar, baking powder and salt. Make a well in center; add juices, oil, egg yolks and fruit peel to well. With wire whisk, stir until smooth.
3 In a separate large bowl, with mixer at high speed, beat egg whites and cream of tartar until soft peaks form when beaters are lifted. Sprinkle in remaining ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating until sugar has dissolved and egg whites stand in

BLUSHING GRAPEFRUIT CUPCAKES

Makes 16 cupcakes.
Source: Food.com

1¼ cups all-purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
1¼ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup oil
¼ cup water
3 large eggs, separated
3 tablespoons plus 1 teaspoon fresh grapefruit juice, divided
2 teaspoons freshly grated grapefruit peel
FOR FROSTING
1 8-ounce package cream cheese, softened
2 teaspoons fresh grapefruit juice
1 teaspoon freshly grated grapefruit peel
1¼ cups confectioners’ sugar
2 drops red food coloring
3 cups grapefruit segments
Mint leaves for garnish
DIRECTIONS
1 Heat oven to 350 degrees. Line 16 regular muffin cups with paper or foil liners.
2 Stir flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt in a large bowl. Make a well in center; put oil, water, egg yolks, 3 tablespoons grapefruit juice and grated peel in well. Whisk liquids to mix, then whisk with flour mixture just until blended and smooth.
3 Beat egg whites in a medium bowl with mixer on high speed until frothy. Add remaining 1 teaspoon grapefruit juice; beat just until stiff peaks form when beaters are lifted. With a rubber spatula, stir ⅓ of beaten egg whites into cupcake batter, then gently fold in remaining whites just until blended. Spoon ¼ cup into each lined cup.
4 Bake 15 to 18 minutes, until tops are browned and a pick inserted near centers comes out clean. Cool in pan on a wire rack 5 minutes before removing to rack to cool completely.
5 To make icing, beat ingredients (except grapefruit segments) in a medium bowl with mixer on low speed just to blend. On high speed, beat until smooth and fluffy. Finely chop 1 grapefruit segment and stir into frosting. Spread on cupcakes.
6 Just before serving: Drain remaining grapefruit segments well and place on cupcakes. Garnish with mint.

Mom’s version of holiday cake far better than other fruitcakes

I’m not a big fan of fruitcake, at least not the traditional version with all the strange-colored candied fruit, but every now and then at Christmas I recall a cake that my mom used to make for the holidays.

Right around Thanksgiving when she had a little extra free time off from her job, she would stir up the dense cake batter and bake it in a fairly slow oven. Once baked, she’d wrap it in cheesecloth soaked with bourbon and store it in a large tin to let it “age” for Christmas dinner.

That was a good cake and far superior, in my humble opinion, to the typical fruitcake.

I made mom’s Kentucky Bourbon Pecan Cake a couple of weeks ago and it’s been in the aging process ever since, though I will have to admit that we sampled the cake a few days ago just to make sure nothing was going wrong. You have to be careful about these things when you’re expecting holiday guests to sample it.

I had forgotten that the cake is a bit of a production to make and calls for four hours of baking time, so it’s not a quick project.

But on initial sampling I think it might be worth it when it comes times for Christmas dinner.

My one inspiration was to substitute dried cranberries for the candied cherries in the recipe. You could use some other dried fruit that you might like better.

Here’s the recipe:
KENTUCKY BOURBON PECAN CAKE:
Makes one 10-inch tube pan

INGREDIENTS
8 cups bourbon
2 ounces golden raisins
16 ounces red candied cherries, halved
¾ pound butter
2 cups white sugar
6 egg yolks
6 egg whites
2 cups packed brown sugar
2 teaspoons ground nutmeg
1 teaspoon baking powder
5 cups all-purpose flour
1 pound chopped pecans
1 cup bourbon
DIRECTIONS
1 Preheat oven to 275 degrees F. Grease a 10-inch tube pan and line bottom with parchment paper.
2 Soak raisins and cherries in 2 cups of bourbon or whiskey for 48 hours. Before making cake, drain well and reserve the bourbon.

3 In a separate bowl, mix flour, nutmeg and baking powder. Set aside.

4 In a small bowl, cream butter with the white sugar. In a separate small bowl, cream yolks and brown sugar until very light.

5 In a very large bowl, combine the two sugar mixtures and blend well.

6 Alternately add flour mixture and reserved bourbon in three stages, mixing well with each addition.

7 Add soaked fruit and fold in. Add nuts and fold in.

8 In a clean medium bowl, whip egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into batter until evenly distributed.

9 Pour into prepared 10-inch tube pan. Place a pan of water in the bottom of the oven and bake for 4 to 5 hours at 275 degrees. Ovens vary, so watch the baking time. Test cake with wooden pick.

10 Remove from oven and allow to cool for 15 minutes before turning out. When almost cool, brush sides and inside hole heavily with bourbon. Wrap cake with bourbon soaked cheesecloth, then with plastic wrap. Refrigerate overnight and saturate again with bourbon. Cover with plastic wrap and then with foil and store for at least 2 weeks in a cool dry place.

Q: I've heard there's a way to decipher the clearance tags at Target, but have had zero luck trying to figure it out myself. Can you help?

A: When it comes to the big-box retail stores, Target is easily one of my favorite stops. I have long been a fan of its trendy sense of style. Since I know I'm not alone in my love of the big red bull's-eye, let's take a closer look at the Target clearance tag.

At first glance, Target clearance tags might seem a bit confusing, but the truth is that you just have to know the code.

Start by looking in the upper-right-hand corner of the bright red clearance tag. You should see a tiny number that says something like 15, 30, 50, 70 or even 90. These numbers tell you how much an item is marked down. The bigger the number, the better the sale!

Second, play close attention to the price. If the price ends in $.04, you know that it has been marked down for final clearance and will not be reduced further. If the price ends in any other number, it will most likely be marked down again during the next markdown cycle as long as there is still inventory in stock.

Next, once an item is placed on clearance at Target, it then typically enters the store's "every two weeks" markdown schedule, meaning that the price will continue to drop every two weeks until the item either sells out or is removed from the store.

So, if you find something great, but the price is still a little too high, wait. Keep checking back every couple of weeks and watch the discount dip, with the exception of holiday merchandise, which is on a much quicker markdown schedule.

Keep in mind that the markdown schedule can vary by region, and is subject to management approval.

Of course, if it is something that you really want, remember the saying that the early bird gets the worm. Because once these items are gone, typically they are gone for good.

I will admit I have missed out on a few great buys because I was sure I could wait for a better deal. It's a great strategy, but it doesn't always work.

Finally, it's all about where you look.

Every department within a Target store has its own specially designated area for clearance items.

For clothes, you will find select clearance racks clearly marked with bright red signs, while other aisles have end caps packed with savings. Happy shopping!

Homemade eggnog worth extra effort

By Daniel Neman
Toledo Blade

It's the season of joy, of good will toward men. Chestnuts are roasting on open fires, sleigh bells are ringing (well, not in the last century or so) and a sense of festivity covers everyone and everything like a light snow.

You're in the mood to celebrate. So why celebrate with a glass of guar gum, carageenan, and mono and diglycerides?

That's what you get when you drink store-bought eggnog. And that's the good stuff. If you buy a carton of eggless, dairy-free nog, you'll also get a healthy dose of whey powder, corn syrup and sodium caseinate.

But it doesn't have to be that way. You can make your own eggnog that is infinitely better than the glop you buy at the store. People have been making their own eggnog for hundreds of years, possibly as far back as medieval England.

Making your own eggnog is a little bit of a hassle, but the results are well worth it.

The basic idea of eggnog is simple: Blend as much egg as you can with as much cream as you can, and sweeten it with sugar. A little vanilla never hurts, and neither does a dusting of nutmeg, particularly when it has been freshly grated. Although eggnog is great on its own, it is also a particularly good medium to blend with alcohol.

First, beat together egg yolks with sugar. Next, add dairy products, often a combination of milk and heavy cream. This would be a good time to add alcohol, too, if you are so inclined. Then, beat the egg whites with a little sugar until they form stiff peaks, and gently fold these into the yolk-and-cream mixture. Finally, chill it and serve it, preferably with a bit of nutmeg on top.

The only questions are about which alcohol to use, if you are using it, and how much.

In America, the traditional high-test additive is bourbon, but that is purely a matter of taste. Brandy is also popular, and so is rum.

The traditional way to make eggnog is with raw eggs, which yields an exceptionally smooth and rich drink. But, if we can use a scientific term, the thought of eating raw eggs creeps some people out.

If you prefer to cook the eggs, that works, too. What you are actually doing is making a thin creme anglaise, a custard that also serves as the basis of creme brulee. All you have to do is heat the yolks and sugar gently with the cream, stirring all the while, until the mixture starts to thicken. But even this method does not cook all of the eggs. Eggnog requires that the raw whites be whipped until they are full of body and then folded into the yolks and cream. Cooked egg whites cannot be whipped.

The eggnog I made for a crowd is perhaps my favorite method of making it. It comes straight from the seminal "Joy of Cooking" cookbook and it makes enough to feed a small army, provided the army is thirsty and full of the holiday spirit.

Even without the alcohol, eggnog is a fattening proposition. Eggs, cream and sugar — you aren't going to lose any weight with those.

Instead of egg yolks, I used a store-bought egg substitute — it's actually just egg whites that have been colored yellow and given a little extra flavor. Instead of cream, I used whole milk (I couldn't bring myself to use skim). I did use sugar instead of a sugar substitute, because I wanted none of the fake-sugar aftertaste. A little bourbon added much-needed flavor.

The result was definitely eggnog lite: a pale imitation of the real thing, but drinkable.

EGGNOG IN QUANTITY

Yield: About 1 gallon

Ingredients

- 12 eggs, separated
- 1 pound confectioners' sugar
- 2 cups dark rum, brandy, bourbon or rye, or to taste, optional
- 2 quarts whipping cream
- Nutmeg, preferably freshly grated

DIRECTIONS

- 1 Beat the egg yolks separately until light in color. Gradually beat in the powdered sugar. Beating constantly, add the alcohol very slowly. Cover and let stand 1 hour to dispel the "eggy" taste.

- 2 Add the whipping cream and refrigerate, covered, for 3 hours.

- 3 Beat 8-12 of the egg whites until stiff, but not dry. Fold them lightly into the other ingredients. Serve sprinkled with nutmeg.

Cook's note: The original recipe calls for up to 4 cups more alcohol. Use your own discretion.

Focusing on peace good way to combat stressful holidays

Overscheduling, over-eating, hurrying here and there, jangled nerves, family tensions, shoulder-to-shoulder crowds peppered with unhappy faces, major credit debts for gifts we often do not even need or appreciate ... Ho, ho, ho, 'tis the season to be jolly.

Is there something wrong with this picture? What ever happened to the spirit of peace that traditionally has been the hallmark of this holiday season?

Take heart. That well-spring of peace is still within us and around us. For many of us, though, it is buried beneath our restless minds, hurried lifestyles and exaggerated desires. The good news is that we can replace holiday stress with holiday peace.

First, drawing upon your own personal experience, jot down brief answers to these three items:

- Looking back over past holidays, what is one cause of seasonal stress you would like to eliminate or reduce this year?
- What would you really enjoy adding to this year's celebrations?
- Name one reasonable thing you could do daily during this season that would bring more peace into your life.

Discuss your answers with family members or friends and invite them to respond to the questions, also. Encourage one another in finding simple, positive ways to put your answers into action.

AMANDA HARDY

COLUMNIST

One of the best ways to combat holiday stress is to take your attention away from it and focus on its opposite — peace. Peace is an inner state of alert calmness and vibrant tranquility. It is harmony with people and one's environment.

True peace is not dependent on outward circumstances, the behavior of others or the absence of illness. It is the ability to accept with composure whatever challenges come our way. Inner peace carries with it a quiet feeling of power and energy.

To feel even a touch of this kind of peace is a healing and renewing experience. And sharing its fruit with others is a two-way blessing.

Here are a few suggestions for cultivating a spirit of peace during the holidays:

- Examine what helps you feel peaceful. Maybe it's having fun with a good friend, listening to uplifting music, praying, meditating, enjoying a good massage or gazing at the stars. Whatever works for you, build more of those experiences into your life.
- If you find yourself rushing all the time, you'll have to break that habit if you're serious about living in abiding peace. Build more free space into your life.

- Reach out to ease the way for others. Scattering kindness, lending a helping hand and spreading cheerfulness are good medicine for all concerned.

- Spend time in nature with your eyes and ears and heart wide open.

- Say no to worrying about the past and fretting about the future..

- Avoid dividing your attention. With peace as your companion, do one thing at a time.

- Make a game of it: See if you can remain unruffled even in the face of challenging situations. Little by little, your skills as a peacemaker will increase.

- Keep in mind that sometimes a lack of peace is an inner call for forgiveness, a change in lifestyle or the healing of a relationship.

If this is the case you'll know it, as long as you sensitively listen to the signals of your body, mind and spirit.

During this rich season of holiday gift giving, remember the words of authors Gerald Jampolsky and Diane Cirincione: "Our inner peace is one of the biggest gifts we can give to another and to the world."

Note: The Henderson County Cooperative Extension Service will close at 4:30 p.m. this Friday and remain closed until 8 a.m. Jan. 2.

Adolescent boy struggles with Christmas concept

Dear Amy: My stepson is the oldest child in our household. For Christmas he has asked my husband and me for several items that we will not buy. Some of these things are too expensive, and some have violent and sexual content. We have explained this to him.

He is old enough, but perhaps not mature enough, to understand our reasons. He argues that our other children get “everything they want.” I am sure this is the way it seems from his perspective (but they are young, and their requests are simple).

My husband and I are willing to get the things on his wish list that are reasonable. But when we tell him that, he says he hates living with us and wants to go to his mom’s, because he can have what he wants

This happens to be true. His mom has discussed with us her intention to purchase several of these questionable gifts. We’ve tried telling him that the gifts don’t equal our love for him, but he doesn’t want to hear that.

Any advice on how we can come to an understanding with him so our Christmas doesn’t end in a tantrum over gifts not received and “I want to go to my mom’s?”

— Mom Seeking Advice
Dear Mom: Twelve-year-old boys are at an extremely tender age. Your stepson is not old enough for things he desperately wants, and yet, he is not young enough to love Christmas the way his siblings do.

He also has an irresponsible mother who is trying to bribe him for his affection by handing him tools that will only contribute to his challenges. My heart goes out to him.

I want to inspire you and your husband to continue doing exactly what you are doing. Talk to him, be patient with him and lavish your time and attention onto him. His dad, especially, should set aside one-on-one dad time for him, away from the younger kids during the holiday season.

If you prepare him and he still throws a tantrum on Christmas Day, then you’ll simply have to do your best to be kind and calm and not let him spoil the day for his siblings. If going to his mother’s house is in the cards on that day, then so be it. If not, then he’ll just have to tolerate being with you.

And, if he is in the slightest way musical or into music, get him a second-hand guitar (or a version of the video game “Guitar Hero”). Every 12-year-old boy should have a guitar.

Dear Amy: My mom always seems to have a problem with any of her kids’ significant others when we are with them. The whole time we are dating, she calls them names and criticizes them, but once we break up, she becomes their friend.

Recently, I decided to leave my boyfriend of more than two years. There has been a lot of pain and hurt, and he has caused a couple of problems between my mom and me. Now, she “likes” him.

I am bothered by her actions and told her so, but she doesn’t care. What’s your take on this?

— Disappointed Daughter
Dear Daughter: Your mother seems overly involved in the personal lives of her children. Now that you recognize her pattern, you should not invite her comments or engage with her when she makes them.

If you are old enough to have a long-term romantic relationship, you should also be mature enough to create and enforce boundaries with your mother. She won’t draw acceptable boundaries, so you should.

Horoscope

TODAY’S BIRTHDAY: (Dec. 16). You’ll feel connected to loved ones and will be able to share openly. This helps you have confidence in other areas of life. You’ll make a mound of money in January and May. 2013 brings an interesting and meaningful new relationship. You’ll finally be able to focus on taking care of yourself in February. Pisces and Aries people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 50, 3, 26, 1 and 16.

ARIES: (March 21-April 19). Many will offer help, opinions, ways for you to spend your money. Get away and listen to your own inner guidance. You won’t regret the decisions you make independently.

TAURUS: (April 20-May 20). You have lofty aims. Human failings must be accounted for, too. Knowing it’s not going to be easy, you’ll go after your goals with the fortitude required to meet them.

GEMINI: (May 21-June 21). You’ll be drawn to mysterious types — those who seem like they’re hiding something good. Can you be discreet? People sense whether or not you can keep a secret.

CANCER: (June 22-July 22). You’ll pose important questions. How can you judge the worthiness of a pursuit? What is a worthwhile use of your time? The answers will start a lifestyle change.

LEO: (July 23-Aug. 22). Your day will be filled with pleasures to savor, like the taste of your favorite drink, the iridescent thrill of an unpredictable sky and the dulcet sound of a loved one’s voice.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). The best part of your day includes a harmonious assemblage of personalities. Look around and appreciate the people you’ve attracted in your life. You fit together.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You feel so strongly about your loved ones that you know you’ll do all you can to be there whenever they need you. If you could sum up your emotions in one word, that word would be “always.”

SCORPIO: (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). The joy of life is dancing under your skin. You’ll share your taste, zest and spring. You may even be able to get a smile out of that depressed person you know.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Organization and happiness go hand in hand. Sometimes there’s a natural order, and life falls into an easy groove. Other times, order is an ideal that requires effort to maintain.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You’ll encounter people far more reserved than you. Don’t take it personally. You may be willing to take social and financial chances that others simply can’t afford to take at this time.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Your social savvy will come in handy. Stay aware of the subtle cues. If someone wants to give you a gift, let it happen. Accepting graciously is an act of generosity.

PISCES: (Feb. 19-March 20). Something surprising will be revealed. You could learn of intriguing relationship developments or get wind of the sordid details of someone’s past.

God doesn’t condone abuse in marriage

BILLY GRAHAM
COLUMNIST

Dear Dr. Graham: I’m concerned about my sister because she’s in a very abusive marriage. I even fear for her life. (She’s been to the emergency room three times recently, always blaming it on accidents — but she’s told me otherwise.)

Does God demand she stay, like her husband says He does?

— Mrs. D.J.
Dear Mrs. D.J.: What her husband is doing is very wrong in God’s eyes — not only by physically abusing his wife, but also by trying to control her by distorting God’s words concerning marriage.

The Bible says, “Husbands, love your wives and do not be harsh with them” (Colossians 3:19).

Don’t misunderstand me; God takes the marriage vow very seriously, and I wouldn’t want anyone to use what I say here as an excuse to break their vows.

But God also values our lives very highly; human life is sacred in His sight because He made us in His image. When someone’s life is in danger (such as from a violent, abusive spouse), then God would have them do whatever they can to remove themselves from that threat. (This doesn’t necessarily mean divorce; it may only mean a period of separation.)

Most communities have an abuse hotline; encourage your sister to contact it so she can make wise decisions and find safe shelter. She may think that’s a drastic step — but it may awaken her husband to his own need for help.

Bullies and abusers often act that way because down inside they feel weak or powerless, or they have other psychological issues they need to face.

Pray for your sister, and do all you can to support her as she faces hard decisions.

Urge her, too, to connect with a church where she’ll find people who will love her and help her. Most of all, remind her that Christ loves her, and He will never abandon her.

Mononucleosis recurrence happens, but is uncommon

COLUMNIST

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I’m a 56-year-old woman in good health. I have been diagnosed with mononucleosis. This is the second time in three years. I also had this at age 19. Can you please clarify this and why I might be prone to have this diagnosis?

— M.M.
Dear M.M.: Acute mononucleosis refers to acute infection by the Epstein-Barr virus, one of the viruses in the herpes family. It is an infectious disease, usually spread by saliva, hence the appropriate nickname “the kissing disease.”

Once mononucleosis has resolved, which can take months, people usually have no further symptoms. Recurrence does happen, but it is rare. Chronic EBV is a rare syndrome. Both chronic and many others. Very often, we never find the exact cause.

It seems much more likely to me that the two “mononucleosis” diagnoses you have had in the past three years are these other conditions that look and feel like EBV. Usually, only sophisticated blood tests — beyond what most doctors do — can separate recurrent EBV mono from the other conditions that cause mononucleosislike illnesses.

Dear Drs. Donohue and Roach: I’m writing in reference to the antibiotic drug Levaquin. I contracted bronchitis in January 2012 and was treated with this drug, and it gave me tendonitis of my left Achilles’ tendon. In July 2012, my tendon ruptured. I’ve had to wear a boot for three months.

Can you explain why this drug is on the market if it can cause a problem like this?

Also, can you tell me if this rupture will heal? I have been told it will heal in time by a specialist in joints and tendons.

— J.F.
Dear J.F.: Levaquin (levofloxacin), like all drugs like in the quinolone class of antibiotics, may have as a rare side effect a full or partial rupture of the Achilles’ tendon.

This is a very bad occurrence but is fortunately quite rare, about 12 times in every 100,000 treatment episodes.

For a complete tear, consultation with a surgeon is essential, and should be done immediately. The surgeon can discuss the merits of surgery and conservative treatment. A partial tear usually heals with rest. The risk of tendon rupture is higher in patients over 60.

No drug is perfect, and all have the possibility of side effects. Levofloxacin can be a life-saving drug. The Food and Drug Administration has to balance risks against benefits, and they felt in this case that the benefits outweighed the risks.

Levofloxacin is a powerful medication, reserved for serious infections. Most cases of bronchitis are caused by viruses, and get better without antibiotics.

Before prescribing an antibiotic, doctors always consider risks and benefits.

Having patients understand these risks might reduce unnecessary antibiotic use.

Beach treasure becomes glue that binds family during holiday season

— Isaac Bashevis Singer
By Carol Clarke Slamowitz
Chicken Soup for the Soul

Interfaith families can understand the minefield the holiday season represents. My husband is Jewish; I was raised Catholic. We have decided to give equal representation to both Christmas and Hanukkah in our home.

The holidays give us a perfect opportunity to share with our children the traditions we had been brought up with and to create traditions of our own. We had a designated corner for a menorah, dreidels and star of David, and another corner for a small tree, lights and nativity.

The kids learned the story of Hanukkah, the prayer as candles were lit on each of the eight nights, and how to spin the dreidel and play for gelt (chocolate candy coins). Our tiny tree was weighed down with innumerable preschool-produced ornaments. Wrapped presents were tucked beneath. We set up our nativity, and the kids learned about the birth of Christ.

We stood in line every year so the kids could tell Santa how good they had been and about the presents they hoped to receive.

This year, shortly before Thanksgiving, the kids decided they wanted a “real” Christmas tree. Our little Charlie Brown tabletop tree was no longer adequate?

Would this disrupt the delicate balance of religious equality we had created in our home? Baffled by the kids’ insistence on a “real” tree and convinced they were simply brainwashed by the rampant commercialism of the approaching holiday, we packed the kids, dog and turkey into the car and headed to Carova Beach.

We discovered Carova Beach by accident. This quiet, off-road community is located nine miles off the asphalt of Highway 12 in the Outer Banks of North Carolina, and is only accessible by four-wheel-drive vehicles or boats. Carova is home to wild horses that are believed to date back to the time of the Spaniards.

At the time, our Jeep’s four-wheel drive was broken, and friends suggested we contact a realtor for a free ride up the beach to look for the horses. Carova consisted, in the mid-1990s, of 300 homes and 75 year-round residents. The volunteer fire department and a row of post office boxes constituted downtown Carova.

We were captivated, and by the year’s end, we had purchased a lot on a canal and began building a small cottage. This became our family retreat, wild horses running through the dunes and wandering in small herds onto the long stretch of beach. A quiet place, where more often than not we’d be the only people walking the beach, looking for sea glass and other beach treasures. We hoped to find peace there this year as well.

The kids quickly became distracted with Thanksgiving, and Marc and I decided to address the “tree dilemma” later. Thanksgiving weekend flew by.

We took long walks, visited our beach neighbors and read in the sun. Soon it was time to go, and I began the routine of packing up and closing the house. My husband and daughter took Mojo (our golden retriever) for a last walk on the beach.

My daughter returned, and with eyes shining announced: “Mom! We found the coolest thing on the beach!”

“What is it?” I asked, imagining a myriad of beach treasures already scattered throughout our home. Seashells, sand dollars, dried seahorses and hundreds of pieces of sea glass. “It was too big to bring back to the house! Hurry!” Now I envisioned less common treasures: a barnacle-encrusted tree branch, washed-up sharks, stingrays and turtles ... and only hoped that whatever it was did not smell too bad, as we still had a long ride home. My husband threw a rope and tarp into the back of the car, and the three (Mojo, too) led her brother and me over the dune.

There on the dune lay a beautiful six-foot Christmas tree, fresh cut, its boughs pushed upward as if still wrapped in protective netting. “We found it at the tide line being tossed by the waves. We dragged it to the dune and waited to see if anyone came for it.” The beach remained deserted.

The tree (plus 40 pounds of sand) was unceremoniously tied to the roof of our car for the trip home. We dubbed it the “Mermaid Tree.”

This brought to mind the parable of the loaves and fishes or the scant amount of oil that brought forth light for eight incredible days. We tied yarn on sand dollars and toasted mini bagels. We had to put those high before Mojo ate them all!

Our daughter made a star of David from aluminum foil, and we placed this at the top of our tree. Lights twinkling, the house filled with the smells of Christmas.

The tree became a representation of all of the things that made us unique and bound us together as a family. It was a balance long ago achieved in our hearts. We have always been unconventional. We do believe in miracles. The miracle of Hanukkah, the miracle of Christmas and the Mermaid Tree.

run off to a hiding spot in a neighbor's yard. "It's lucky I found him," Sugg said.

Also ironic is the fact that just a week or so after Chazz escaped from the family on Hi-Y Drive, they moved to Indianapolis. Assuming they would have taken the dog that they had for almost two months with them, if he hadn't escaped he would have been living in Indy and never reunited with Patsy.

"So the timing (of Chazz's escape) was critical," Judy said.

LOST AGAIN

When Judy called Patsy on that Wednesday to tell her that Chazz had been found, Patsy asked that Judy keep the dog at her house until they could get home on Sunday.

So Judy took Chazz to her house, where she has several dogs of her own. About 5 p.m. on Chazz's first day there, Judy put all the dogs out in her fenced-in yard for a few minutes before she left.

When she brought them back inside, Chazz wasn't with the others. She thought he might be hiding, but after a thorough check of the yard, Judy realized that the little pup had somehow slipped through a 2-inch slot in the fence.

"I was running up and down the street" looking for him, frantic to find the little guy. The last thing she wanted to do was to call Patsy and say that Chazz was missing again. "The thought of telling Ben and Patsy I had lost him was sickening," Judy said.

She went around to the houses on her street and a neighbor told her that a young couple (Samantha Hawkins, 17, and Gage Bullock, 16, it was later learned) who had found a small dog on North Elm Street had just stopped by. The young man happened to mention that his girlfriend's mother was "into rescue."

Judy knew of at least three Henderson women who helped with animal rescues and quickly narrowed it down to Paula Hawkins, who runs New Hope Animal Rescue Center.

As soon as Judy could track down Paula's number, she called her. "Praise the Lord, before my story was even out, she said 'I have him.'"

"I met her at the New Hope Center on Atkinson Street, and sure enough, there was Chazz," Judy said. "You can only imagine my relief!

Chazz had more dark hair around his face when he was just a puppy.

"Thank God Paula's daughter and boyfriend picked him up," Judy said.

DOUBLE BONUS

While Judy was at New Hope, she remembered that her neighbors' dog, a Jack Russell, had recently disappeared. She asked Paula if any such dogs had come in recently, and one had.

"Over the next few minutes, with phone calls and texts, we discovered that New Hope had received my neighbors' dog, and so Chazzy helped reunite some very happy young boys with their dog! Is this not a Christmas story to remember?" Judy said.

HOME IN GRANTWOOD

On that Sunday when the Campbells were returning from their Thanksgiving trip, "I just couldn't wait to get here and see him," Patsy said.

Although Chazz has almost no sight and no hearing, "I thought of course he'll recognize me immediately," Patsy said. "I think he recognized Benson more than me, but it didn't take but a couple of minutes" before he knew her, too.

He was a little disoriented around the house at first, especially since lots of boxes of Christmas decorations were sitting out, but "now he's back to his routine. He gets the newspaper in the morning. Benson after work gives him a treat. He's fallen back into his routine."

Fortunately, Patsy hadn't gotten rid of any of his food, toys, treats, dishes or beds, so he could return to almost everything just like it was when he left home.

A few things have changed since Chazz's return, though.

He sits for longer periods of time in Patsy's lap or right next to her on the chair. "Chazz, you want to sit here; we'll sit here all day. I'm just so glad he's with me and by my side," Patsy said.

She also makes sure that when he goes outside with them, he always comes back in.

"I told Benson: 'Don't you come in the door until he comes in first.'"

FOREVER THANKFUL

Patsy said she can't begin to comprehend and thank all the people who are responsible for Chazz's safe return.

"We're very grateful to the lady who took care of him and especially grateful to Judy who didn't give up and John Sugg and his wife who did the responsible thing and put the ad in the paper."

Both Patsy and Judy believe divine intervention played a huge role in Chazz's return.

While Judy credits guardian angels, Patsy said "I think he has the long arm of God" looking out for him. He was supposed to come back home and that's where he is supposed to spend the rest of his life."

As far as Patsy is concerned, Christmas came early at the Campbell home, with Chazz's return being the best gift possible.

"Everything else is just a bonus," she said. "It just doesn't happen in life where you lose something and mourn for it and then you get it back. It just doesn't happen."

Holiday gifts for pets following high-tech trend

By Sue Manning
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A holiday present for Fido or Fluffy used to be an extra table scrap or a new squeeze toy. But as with gifts for their human counterparts, pet presents are becoming increasingly high-tech.

Like presents for young children who lack the dexterity to enjoy their new playthings, pet gifts are usually for the human who owns the pet. Allie Robino of Austin, Texas, bought a dog treat maker for her 8-year-old rescue mutt Bentley, but it'll be her baking the biscuits — not Bentley.

She bought PetSmart's Sunbeam Holiday Dog Treat Maker, essentially a waffle-maker with dog-bone molds, for Bentley when she took him to see Santa Claus at a Fort Worth pet store. Even though he and her other dog, Shiner, will be the primary beneficiaries of the purchase, it's mostly a gift for Robino, who admits to having problems making things at home from scratch.

"A lot of these kinds of things end up being more complicated than the company promises, but this was super easy to use and the finished product looked great. Believe me, if it were possible to mess up, I would have messed up. I'm batting zero on Pinterest," she said, referring to the photo-sharing website beloved by amateur chefs and DIY-crafters.

Robino said it was the only time she has bought a gift for a pet that requires electricity, figuring that would put Bentley in a rarefied group of animals with high-tech presents. But there are actually plenty of gadgets in stores for animals, from the predictable (dog barking control, electronic self-cleaning cat litter boxes) to the surprising (exercise equipment, air conditioners for doghouses, pet air purifiers for human houses).

Technology is having an impact in every area of the pet world, including food, toys and care products, said Bob Vetere, president of the American Pet Products Association. He believes health care advances are moving the fastest.

"There are many advances on the pet rehabilitation side of health care that weren't even heard of a few years ago. There are also new advances in medication, treatments, and even testing and diagnostic areas. For example, you can send off your pet's DNA to find out their breed and even give at-home tests to determine if certain diseases are present," he said.

Rehab equipment for pets, such as a dog-size treadmill, are no longer just for veterinarian clinics. Pet owners can buy the DogPacer's Minipacer treadmill ($479), which is made for dogs under 55 pounds. The original DogPacer treadmill will accommodate dogs up to 179 pounds and sells for $499 — about the same price as human-size gym equipment.

For owners who exercise with their pets, the Sharper Image Pet-O-Meter Pet Pedometer ($19.99) counts steps, calculates distance and tracks the calorie intake of the human partner.

Meanwhile, the proliferation of apps for mobile devices offers clutter-free options for urban pet owners with little living space.

There are apps that track pets' whereabouts, like the GPS-based monthly service Tagg Pet Tracker, which can alert owners if a dog leaves a designated area or monitor a pet's physical activity. For a simpler option, PetHub dog tags and collars make owners' contact information accessible through a scanning app on a mobile device, and animal shelter and GPS tracking services can be added.

Vetere believes the best high-tech pet product is the microchip, which can be implanted in dogs, cats, birds, horses and other animals and will help reunite owners with lost pets.

"They are also widely used by industry professionals to track vaccinations, test results and other records. With GPS microchips now available as well, your missing pet cannot only be tracked back to you, but you can now track them down and prove ownership if need be," he said.

Vetere predicts hot high-tech gifts this year will be microchip pet doors, which open using a chip implanted in the animal. He said the most popular products will always be those that make life easier for pet owners — "like automatic feeders and water delivery systems, automatic litter boxes, grooming tools that comb and also vacuum up the pet hair."

On Vetere's personal wishlist is "an automatic yard cleaner that would pick up after my dog, but I don't see how that would work without a robot," he said.

For pets and owners who do volunteer work — yes, there's an app for that, too. For example, the $149.99 TouchChat alternative communication app lets people who have difficulty speaking play with a dog using voice commands.

Ricochet, a 4-year-old golden retriever from San Diego, works with people who have Down syndrome, who are autistic or who suffered strokes. Patients touch an iPad, prompting a synthesized voice to deliver a command like sit or turn around or down. If the dog performs the command (and Ricochet always does), the patient can throw her a treat.

"No cues, inflection or interaction is needed from her handler. They can communicate with Ricochet directly, giving them a sense of independence, self-confidence and empowerment," said owner Judy Fridono.

Tech & Net

Mind your e-manners in communications with friends electronically

I was taught that there are a few cornerstones to polite social interactions: Don't interrupt people when they're speaking, say please and thank you, and always send a written thank-you note.

Yet in today's world of texts, emails, Facebook posts and tweets, many of the basic guidelines we try to follow in face-to-face interactions can be easily overlooked.

One of the biggest challenges of written communication such as email and texting is the inability to convey tone or humor.

Because people can't see your facial expression or hear the tone in your voice, they can't tell whether you're being sarcastic or serious. Hurt feelings can arise when you're just kidding.

To combat this, communicate clearly and to the point. Always reread what you write before you click send, checking tone, grammar and spelling.

Make sure what you've written is similar to what you'd say face-to-face. Remember to include the please and thank you that you would have conveyed in person.

When emailing, avoid using abbreviations that you would use when texting, such as LOL or l8r.

Don't write in all caps or use too many exclamation points. This is perceived as "yelling" within electronic communications.

When sending or receiving emails involving multiple parties, follow some simple guidelines:

- When responding to an email, don't click "reply to all." Include only the recipients that need to hear from you.
- When forwarding an email, delete additional email addresses from the attached messages.
- Remove any comments in email strings that should be kept private between the parties involved.
- Use the BCC field when sending an email to a large number of recipients. They'll thank you for not broadcasting their email addresses to the world.

According to research conducted by the Pew Internet & American Life Project, 85 percent of American adults have a cellphone and 79 percent of cellphone owners use text messaging. The chime or buzz of an incoming call or text can be distracting and alluring, leading many of us to use our mobile devices at inopportune times.

First and foremost, remember that the person standing in front of you is vastly more important than the text message you just received. Don't interrupt your conversation with digital distractions.

When you're talking on the phone in public, be aware of your surroundings and try to keep your voice down. Don't discuss your personal life on your cellphone in the office or in a restaurant.

Not only does this show consideration for others around you, but it protects your privacy as well. Try to make it brief so you don't disturb the people in your carpool with a lengthy conversation.

When you're in a crowded environment, don't crank up the sound on your Angry Birds game. Either mute the volume or wear solid-fitting earbuds so others around you are not disturbed. Just don't forget to remove your earphones when someone is trying to talk to you!

Lastly, turn off your devices completely when you enter a church, movie theater or library. Even vibrate mode can be disturbing to others trying to concentrate.

The Pew Internet & American Life Project also found that 66 percent of adults who access the Internet use social media such as Facebook, Twitter, MySpace or LinkedIn. Remember, the Internet is not a private place — parents, teachers and employers are frequently able to see what you post.

Don't post something about others before checking with them first. You could ruin a relationship or unintentionally embarrass someone.

Try to keep your posts positive, and avoid posting gossip or anything that is not true. Not only will these types of posts influence the way people perceive you, but they can hurt feelings or come across as bullying. Definitely avoid posting when you're angry or frustrated.

Apple's softer side emerges under CEO Tim Cook

■ Company announces production of one of their Macs moving to U.S.

By Peter Svensson
AP technology writer

NEW YORK — "Those jobs aren't coming back."

That's what Steve Jobs reportedly told President Obama when asked at a dinner in early 2011 whether Apple would consider moving some of its manufacturing from China to the United States.

Jobs' successor, CEO Tim Cook, might have another response for Obama: Yes, we can.

Though the metal edges of its PCs and mobile devices are as sharp and severe as ever, Apple is emerging under Cook's leadership as a kinder corporate citizen. Cook's announcement this week that the company is moving the production of one of its Mac computer lines to the U.S. is just the latest step in a softening of the company's image following the October 2011 death of CEO and co-founder Jobs.

"Cook is a gentler being in terms of how he projects himself," says Gartner analyst Carolina Milanesi. That's partly of necessity, she says — few people would tolerate Jobs-like arrogance in a new CEO — but it's also a reflection of Cook's personality.

Cook was born in Alabama and at age 52 it seems he is still very much a southern gentleman. He joined Apple Inc. in 1998 from IBM Corp., where he worked for 12 years. Starting out as Apple's senior vice president of worldwide operations, he rose through the ranks to become chief operating officer. He made a name for himself as an expert organizer of manufacturing processes and a deft manager of supply chains. Cook ran Apple's day-to-day operations for years before he was named CEO in August 2011, but stayed in the background while Jobs commanded the spotlight.

Cook didn't say which computers Apple would make in the U.S., or where the company might locate new facilities. But bringing assembly-line jobs back to the U.S. lights a symbolic beacon of hope for working-class Americans who worry that the global economy has no use for them.

Cook's reforms have been both internal and outward-facing. Earlier this year, he visited the Chinese factories where Apple products are assembled, amid an Apple-financed audit of working conditions. Shortly after, Foxconn promised to limit working hours and raise wages.

U.S. workers are getting a better deal too. The Wall Street Journal reported in early November that the company will let some employees take up to two weeks of paid leave to work on pet projects that might benefit the company. The program is similar to a famous perk available to Google employees, who get to devote 20 percent of their time to entrepreneurial "hobbies."

In addition, the company now matches employee donations up to $10,000 a year. Tim Cook himself made $100 million in charitable donations early in the year, another contrast to Jobs, who had little interest in philanthropy.

Under Cook, Apple has also become more investor-friendly. Jobs, perhaps scarred by Apple's lean years in the 1990s, was opposed to Apple parting with its cash reserves. That led to the company accumulating a rainy-day fund of nearly $100 billion in cash by the end of his tenure — a hoard that investors would have liked for themselves.

This year, Apple has begun sharing its wealth with investors for the first time in two decades, by paying dividends of nearly $10 billion a year.

Cook's diplomacy has extended into enemy territory. Jobs was furious that phones running Google Inc.'s Android software mimicked Apple's iPhone so closely and vowed to wage "thermonuclear war" against the company through patent infringement lawsuits. The worldwide onslaught of litigation is still ongoing, but in early November, Apple agreed to a cease-fire on one front: It settled all its patent suits against Google partner HTC Corp., a struggling Taiwanese maker of smartphones.

The terms were not disclosed, but company watchers believe HTC will be paying Apple royalties on the phones it makes, and some saw it as a sign that Apple was taking a more rational stance and starting to put Jobs' take-no-prisoners fury behind it.

Carl Howe, an analyst with Yankee Group, says the image of a "softer" Apple that's emerged this year doesn't mean Cook is a softy.

"Make no mistake: he's not necessarily a kind, gentle guy if he needs to get something done. He's a very hard-nosed, demanding boss," Howe says. "And he's very much of the Steve Jobs model, where if you're the janitor you get to make excuses. If you're the vice president, you don't."

Cook, in fact, engineered a major shake-up in Apple's top ranks this fall. Scott Forstall, the long-serving head of iPhone software development, stepped down and his responsibilities were divided among other executives. Company watchers attributed his departure to difficulties collaborating with other departments and to the scathing reviews that greeted Apple's Maps application, which replaced Google Maps.

Weather phone apps help you on the go

By Anick Jesdanun
Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — For me, climate change is a serious issue. No, I'm not referring to the debate over global warming. My concerns are much simpler. I'm constantly checking the weather for the hours and days ahead because deciding to hike on a rainy day or neglecting to dress warmly can put a damper on a vacation.

During recent travels, I tried several free weather apps for the iPhone and Android phones. (Versions for tablet computers also are available, but I didn't test those extensively.)

I didn't try to determine which is more accurate at predicting the weather. They are all generally good, but not error-free. Rather, I evaluated each based on features and ease of use.

The ones I tested operate similarly on iPhones and Android phones, though there are some differences in how information gets presented or accessed. Here's a look at three apps I recommend:

The Weather Channel

When you open this app, the home screen presents you with current conditions, including temperature, humidity, wind, visibility, UV index (a gauge of the strength of ultraviolet radiation) and dew point (which I have yet to figure out a use for). You also get information on sunrise and sunset times.

Navigating the tabs, you get hourly forecasts for the next 24 hours on the iPhone and 15 on the Android. On both, you get daily forecasts for the next 10 days. The Android version doesn't include dates, so you're left to figure out whether Saturday means this Saturday or next weekend. Click on "36 Hour" for brief written summaries for today, tonight and tomorrow.

The map shows you the radar for your region, giving you an idea of how far away a storm might be. During my travels, I've used this feature to gauge how quickly heavy rain might pass. You can switch that to show cloud cover instead of radar, or show both. You can also add details such as rain or snow over the past 24 hours.

You can check weather anywhere in the U.S. by entering a city name or ZIP code. Or click on a target icon for the weather where you are, as determined by your phone. There's a location icon at the bottom of the Android version. On the iPhone, you're left to figure out that you need to click on the magnifying glass or the "i" button for settings. Flick the screen left or right to check weather in other locations you have stored.

The app also offers video of weather forecasts and news, with those from your city or region coming up first.

Conclusion: You get lots of information on current conditions and the most options of the three for viewing maps. Limiting hourly forecasts to 24 hours or less is stingy. On The Weather Channel's website, I get two days of hourly forecasts.

AccuWeather

The home screen also offers temperature, humidity, wind, UV index and visibility conditions, plus sunrise and sunset. The Android version lists wind gusts, not just wind speeds. The iPhone version has information on dew point, while Android does not.

AccuWeather goes beyond The Weather Channel in offering 15 days of forecasts, not just 10, and offers dates on both the iPhone and Android. Its extended forecasts are also more detailed than the Weather Channel's. You can click on a day to get those details.

Comparable with The Weather Channel, AccuWeather offers just 24 hours of hourly forecasts on its app. By contrast, you get more than three days on its website, and even more with a paid subscription. AccuWeather has more details than The Weather Channel for each hour, though you're left to figure out where to flick and touch to get those details.

AccuWeather's map is adequate, but doesn't offer as many options as The Weather Channel's.

As for location, the Android version has a target icon on the home screen (it's buried in the other apps) to quickly pull up information on where you are. That button is not coming to the iPhone for another few months, so for now, the location is harder to change. Unlike the other apps I tried, AccuWeather doesn't offer suggestions as you start typing in the name of a city to switch locations. With big fingers on a small touch keyboard, I had to type "Sault Ste. Marie" in its entirety for the sister cities in Michigan and Ontario.

Like The Weather Channel, AccuWeather offers local, regional and national video. AccuWeather has special forecasts for certain types of activities — such as golfing, bicycling and lawn mowing — as well as risks for asthma, flu and migraines. However, you're just given a one-word assessment, such as "poor" or "excellent," with no clues as to why it might be a horrible day to run or ski.

Conclusion: The app could be better with its hourly forecasts. It also ought to be easier to change locations. The activities forecasts show promise, though I long for more details. AccuWeather promises some of these desired features in a few months. AccuWeather has typically been my first stop for weather information on a regular computer, but the app leaves me wanting for now — unless I'm looking for extended forecasts.

WeatherBug

This app's home screen crams a lot of useful information without clutter. That screen doesn't give you as much detail as the others on current conditions. Humidity, dew point and UV index are missing from the Android version, and neither version has information on visibility, sunset or sunrise. What you get instead is a graphical forecast for upcoming days — today plus five days for Android and two for the iPhone.

Touch on the forecast section for additional days and details — though you get only seven in all, the fewest of the three apps. Click on any day for written summaries of day and evening forecasts. Then click on that for hourly forecasts. Yes, that means nearly seven days of hourly forecasts, not the stingy 24 hours (or less) offered by the other two.

WeatherBug's radar map is OK, but not as versatile as The Weather Channel's.

WeatherBug doesn't have a target icon on the Android version to help you quickly get weather for where you are, but it's not really needed. On both the iPhone and Android, weather automatically updates to your current location when you have GPS enabled.

Switching locations or adding one by city or ZIP code is relatively easy, but only the iPhone version offers suggestions as you type. Once you enter a city, you can narrow your choice to a specific school, airport or other weather monitoring station. WeatherBug has placed more than 10,000 of these across the country. The others offer localized weather by analyzing available data from government and private sources. From my office in New York, I can get current conditions at a nearby school rather than a Central Park station 1.6 miles farther away.

Video is limited to national forecasts, but still images from several nearby locations let you see for yourself whether it's raining.

Conclusion: I find WeatherBug to be the easiest to use of the three, and I love the extended hourly forecasts. It's a good choice as long as you're not looking for a lot of video and a forecast beyond seven days.

Driving faster may not feel safe for ‘geezer’

Dear Tom and Ray: I am 65 and not yet ready to become a “geezerette.” My husband is two years older, and although he may look like one, he is not a geezer yet either.

Except when he drives in our university town, that is. He is making me nuts. We have a couple of four-lane main drags in our town with 45-mph speed limits. He drives in the passing lane at 35 with a beatific smile on his face.

Last evening, after taking my mother to supper and driving through the same residential neighborhood we always do, he drove 20 mph and commented: “That house really intrigues me. ... Hmmm, the utilities are marked there. ... That bush has bloomed twice this year.”

I was tempted to jump out of the car. We were going so slowly that I probably wouldn’t have been hurt.

This issue is not a problem on the highway. He knows exactly how much over the speed limit he can go to not get ticketed.

Once in eastern Colorado, he was driving 95 in my BMW.

Just to show you the kind of guy he is, this car was his 40th wedding anniversary gift to me.

One Saturday we were going to the farmers market, and I insisted on driving. When we got home, he said: “Well, you have an extra minute and a half. I hope you do something constructive with it.” Ouch.

My husband is a professional guy and still runs a consulting firm, works out several times a week and volunteers in a variety of places. I just don’t want to drive with a geezer and have others perceive him as one! Help!

— Gayle

Tom: I’ve got bad news for you, Gayle. Your husband IS a geezer. And before all you geezers write to us and complain, please note that we use the word “geezer” as a term of endearment. Like “knucklehead.”

Ray: My brother should know. He’s both. But on the geezer side, his average driving speed has declined from about 42.5 mph to 15 in recent years.

Tom: Well, some things change when you get older.

Tom: Well, I’ve noticed that at some point, my reflexes started slowing down.

My eyes don’t notice things quite as quickly, and my brain and body don’t react to them as fast. So, in the interests of self-protection, my brain has made me drive slower, so things feel manageable.

Ray: Yeah. I don’t think he made a conscious decision to slow down; I think his brain did it for him, because it was sending the message that driving faster doesn’t feel safe.

Tom: As long as I’m aware of what’s going on around me, and I’m not making a traffic hazard of myself (like by going 35 in the passing lane), it’s fine to drive a little slower.

Ray: So I don’t think you really want your hubby to speed up, Gayle.

Even though he isn’t saying so, I suspect he doesn’t feel safe driving at normal speeds anymore. He even feels unsafe when you’re driving at a higher speed, because it seems much faster to him than it used to.

Tom: Why is he fine on the highway? Well, my guess is that highway driving is easier for him. There are no turns in the road, no crossing or even oncoming traffic, no pedestrians, no parked cars, no bicyclists, no tree limbs.

So it’s easier for him to maintain a steady speed without the distractions.

Ray: So if you’re convinced that he’s cognitively OK — and it sounds like he is, from the work he’s doing — and you’re convinced that he’s not doing this just to drive you crazy, then you want to check the basics and make sure his eyesight and hearing are where they should be.

Tom: If he passes those tests, then he’s just entering geezerdom. Sorry, Gayle — it happens to all of us! Or at least those lucky enough to make it that far. In which case, you have two choices.

Tom: He’s obviously developing a “stop and smell the roses” philosophy, and maybe you can sell him on the fact that he’ll be freer to enjoy his surroundings since you’ll be watching the road.

Ray: Right. That way, he can take note of all the bushes that bloom twice. And all the places where the utilities are marked. Good luck, Gayle. And don’t forget to breathe.

Sales of plug-in electric cars soar in 2012

■ Conventional hybrid sales grow by more than 50 percent

By Richard Williamson
Scripps Howard News Service

As this eventful year nears its end, let it be remembered for the rise of the electric car.

Sales of plug-in electric cars — both hybrids and battery electrics — tripled in model year 2012, their second year on the market.

Plug-in hybrid sales have surpassed the sales of conventional hybrids in 2001, which was their second year on the market.

Despite the political rhetoric of the election year, the most popular electric-drive vehicle, the Chevy Volt plug-in hybrid, is outselling half of all cars on the market today. In the meantime, conventional hybrid sales grew by more than 50 percent in model year 2012, more than four times as fast as the rest of the vehicle market.

These facts are highlighted in a backgrounder from the Union of Concerned Scientists for the Los Angeles Auto Show, which has positioned itself as the premiere staging area for cars that tread lightly on the environment.

Among the new electrics introduced in L.A. are the Chevrolet Spark EV and the Fiat 500e, developed by Chrysler and its Italian partner, Fiat SpA. Chevy says the Spark will hop from parked to 60 mph in less than 8 seconds, making it one of the fastest EVs on the market.

While California is the epicenter of electric vehicle rollouts, it is not the only market in the country for such novelties. There is a personality type in every state that likes the idea of never visiting the fuel pump. I know a journalist who bought a Chevrolet Volt in the Upper Midwest for his personal use and loves it. He makes a game of never having the gas engine kick on, which happens if the electric battery runs out of juice.

The pure electrics appeal to an even more select slice of the market. The Nissan Leaf won most of the publicity for its lack of an internal combustion engine, but other pure-electrics are arriving on the scene.

I recently drove a 2012 Mitsubishi i-MiEV, an electric version of the Mitsubishi I manufactured in Japan. The car’s range of about 56 miles before a recharge was an obvious limiting factor, but the car was fun, fast, relatively roomy and perfect for the short hauls that life requires.

The price of $31,125 was a bit daunting, but that was before the tax incentives were included. Factoring in the tax breaks, Mitsubishi says the i-MiEV has “starting net value” of $21,625 for the ES trim and $23,625 for the higher SE version.

The i-MiEV carries EPA ratings of 126 miles per gallon equivalency in city driving and 99 mpg in highway driving and achieves a “real world” EPA driving range of 62 miles.

The car’s batteries can be recharged in about 22 hours with the 120-volt Level 1 portable charging cable, or 7 hours by a dedicated 240v Level 2 EVSE charger. The battery can take an 80 percent charge in under 30 minutes from a public Level 3 quick charging station via the optional charging port.

Charging stations are a limitation, but

“Detractors declare failure if the new technology is not leading the race right out of the gate or when expected bumps in the road materialize,” the Union of Concerned Scientists says in its report. “They also use unrealistic marketing goals as a yardstick for the success of EVs rather than looking at the real progress that has been made.”

To emphasize the point, the union notes that the Toyota Prius, a pioneering hybrid that was seen as experimental a decade ago, is now the best-selling car in California.

Consider options before tapping into 401(k)

By Steve Buccia
bankrate.com

Dear Debt Adviser: I have read a lot on whether it is wise to withdraw 401(k) savings early to pay off debts. The answer is always no. But I believe my situation may be different. Our two-income household has suddenly become one-income. Even if a new job is found, a pay cut is inevitable.

Would it be considered a hardship withdrawal to pay off credit cards and medical bills with 401(k) money? Without additional income, we’ll soon have to choose between paying the credit cards or the mortgage. We understand the 10 percent early withdrawal penalty plus taxes will hurt now. But we fear losing everything else.

— Amy

Dear Amy: Let’s start with your first question, about hardship withdrawals. The Internal Revenue Service has specific rules for penalty-free hardship withdrawals. You would need to check with your 401(k) plan administrator for specific policies in place for hardship withdrawals with your plan.

The reason everything you read says, “No, don’t raid your 401(k) account to pay off debt,” is that it’s almost always the correct answer. It doesn’t make good financial sense when we are talking about paying unsecured debt such as credit cards or medical bills. You need to leave your retirement funds intact because you may need them later much more than you do now.

In your case, there is another issue: job hunting. The answer to your specific situation lies in how long you think it will take to become a two-income household again. If you have good reason to believe the unemployment period is nearly over, then I’d say you could consider using some of the retirement funds to pay the card minimums. But don’t pay them off. If extended unemployment is a real possibility, then I recommend you don’t touch your retirement funds.

Here’s my reasoning. A credit check often precedes a job offer. Using your retirement funds to pay the minimums will enable you to keep your payment history intact. A prospective employer who sees a bad credit record may infer you are unreliable, don’t keep your promises or are irresponsible. No one is looking for those qualities in a new hire.

Additionally, it’s not clear to me that you can cover your essential living expenses with just one salary even if you pay off your unsecured debts. What I recommend, if you have not done so already, is to develop a bare-bones budget based on your current income.

Prioritize all your expenses. First on the list should be your mortgage and groceries. Transportation to work would be next, followed by essential utilities.

Review your payroll deductions to see if you can reduce some. If you received a sizable refund last year, for instance, you can likely cut your tax withholding. If you can’t cover all your essential expenses with your reduced income, then it makes no sense to use the 401(k). You’ll still be underwater. But your 401(k) will remain intact and safe from collectors in most cases.

Airlines find new ways to make extra bucks

Cocktails, craft beers are finding their way into cabins

By Scott Mayerowitz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Airlines have found a way to take the edge off the stress of flying and make a few extra bucks along the way: fancy new cocktails, craft beers and elegant wines.

The drinks advertised in the back of in-flight magazines — or on sleek seat back touchscreens — are starting to resemble those at the hottest nightclubs.

■ Virgin America offers “Grandma’s Coffee,” an iced cappuccino with Jack Daniels whiskey for $9. Its beer selection includes San Francisco-based 21st Amendment and Black Star from Whitefish, Mont. Both cost $7. A Bud Light is $6.

■ US Airways has partnered with mixer company Stirrings to sell mojitos and cosmos for $8 each.

■ Delta offers the “Sky Breeze,” which is vodka, Fresca and a splash of cranberry-apple juice over ice for $7. It also sells small batch bourbon from Woodford Reserve for $7.

get travelers into the mindset of their destination. United sells a “Trader Vic’s Mai Tai” for $9 on flights to and from Hawaii.

“It’s simply a matter of finding a way to get people to spend money,” says Henry Harteveldt, a travel industry analyst with Hudson Crossing. “They see people spending $12, $14, $15 or more for fancy martinis, cosmopolitans or other beverages on the ground.”

Flying isn’t what it used to be. Long lines, ever-changing security rules and limited overhead bin space have all made traveling much more stressful. It’s no wonder many passengers look for a little escape.

Airlines — who created much of this anxiety — are happy to oblige.

“We wanted to do stuff to surprise people, be a little more different and have fun,” says Megan Mosier Ireland, who helps design Delta’s drink offerings.

The specialty drinks are part of a larger push to get passengers to pay for a little in-flight luxury. Fliers can now opt for more legroom, Internet access or even shorter security lines, all for an extra fee. Those perks and others — along with baggage fees — now account for nearly 7 percent of U.S. airlines’ revenue. That’s up from just 2 percent five years ago. The government doesn’t require airlines to break out specific data on alcohol sales.

Airlines have found a way to take the edge off the stress of flying and make a few extra bucks along the way: fancy new cocktails, craft beers and elegant wines.

But airlines are clearly doing everything they can to drive liquor sales. And it’s not just by putting fancy drinks on the menu. Want to buy a drink for that lovely lady across the aisle? Virgin America will soon launch a “send a drink” feature. Passengers can use the plane’s seat back entertainment system to buy their neighbors a margarita, merlot or maybe a shot of tequila.

When people fly is a significant factor in how much they’ll drink, according to GuestLogix, which processes about 90 percent of onboard credit card transactions for North American airlines.

Fliers drink more on Thursdays than any other day of the week, with alcohol sales in the past year averaging $62 per flight, according to GuestLogix. For many consultants, salesmen and other frequent fliers, Thursday marks the end of their week away from home.

“That’s when I let loose and wind down,” says Oscar Ron- don, a road warrior and director of cable network sales systems for WideOrbit. “After a long week, it’s a nice reward ... even if it’s in a little tiny, plastic cup.”

Fliers drink the least on Mondays — average liquor sales per flight are 44 percent below Thursdays.

Time of year and the destination also determine how many bloody marys, vodka tonics and beers are poured.

The week of March 8 — spring break — had the highest overall liquor sales in the last 12 months at nearly $58 a flight. The slowest time of year is right after Christmas and New Year’s, when passengers have already had plenty to drink and many are traveling with their families.

CHOCOLATE from 1D

installed by El Rey helps keep the crop dry when it rains.

“It’s the institution that has helped us the most,” Planchar said of the company.

On a recent morning, Planchar and six other men squatted among the trees, cracking open the cacao pods with machetes and scooping out clumps of white pulp and seeds with their fingers.

“This one’s ready. Look at the color,” Planchar said, cradling a golden yellow pod in his hands. While they worked, he and the other men smoked cigars and passed around a bottle of homemade liquor made from local plants and spices.

Planchar said he can earn the equivalent of $465 a month, and he hopes for higher prices and more assistance of the sort El Rey is providing, as well as credit. His typical earnings are less than the minimum wage of $476 for those with regular full-time jobs, and as a result many independent farmers do other work to make ends meet.

Venezuela’s cacao has long been highly prized as an export, harvested by slaves during Spanish colonial times in the 1600s and shipped off to Europe in increasing amounts. Then came oil in the early 20th century, passing coffee and cacao, and taking root as the lifeblood of Venezuela’s economy.

Today Venezuela produces about 17,000 tons of cacao a year, less than one-half of 1 percent of the world’s production, said Cesar Guevara, president of the country’s cacao industry association. Venezuela is one of a select group of countries producing fine aromatic varieties of cacao, along with Ecuador, Trinidad and Tobago, and some other Caribbean islands. Nonetheless, cacao has long been viewed as an artisanal crop here and hasn’t been promoted for export on a large scale.

Connoisseurs differentiate between the rich assortment of varieties of cacao in Venezuela, with names such as Porcelana and Rio Caribe, as they would with fine wines.

“Venezuela has always been a fantastic, wonderful chocolate for me,” said Michael Recchiuti, a chocolatier in San Francisco, California, who chooses Venezuelan chocolate for some of his creations and says it has a distinctive flavor with touches of yellow fruit and “blond tobacco” notes. He said he considers it to be among the world’s finest, along with chocolates from Madagascar, Ecuador and other countries.

El Rey’s business has expanded since 1995, when it launched a line of single-bean variety bars. They come in shades from milk chocolate to dark chocolate named after varieties of shade trees found on plantations.

Another business that has been flourishing is the family-owned Hacienda San Jose on the eastern Paria Peninsula, which has been producing cacao since 1830. Sales manager Claudia Franceschi, who represents the family’s sixth generation in the business, said domestic sales of their Chocolate San Jose bars have more than doubled recently and a new brand of dark chocolates will be exported starting next year.

German-born Kai Rosenberg, however, tells a different story. He said his small plantations were seized by the government without warning when National Guard troops arrived in 2010. “There was no explanation. They just came and put a lock on my door and said we had to go,” said Rosenberg, who hasn’t been able to talk with anyone in the government since about compensation.

“They don’t want to pay, and this is the rule rather than the exception,” said Rosenberg, who for nearly three decades worked to recover rare varieties of criollo cacao. He is now challenging the government in court but isn’t optimistic about his chances.

Meanwhile, the government’s plan to buy and sell cacao in Barlovento remains up in the air; private companies such as El Rey and Nestle continue to lead the market nationwide. “We’re not exactly sure how this is going to pan out,” Redmond said. Officials with the state company couldn’t be reached for comment.

In a previous state foray into the market in the 1970s, the government sought to establish a monopoly to buy and sell cacao. But Redmond and others say that led to a disastrous drop in production and the effort was scrapped.

For now, El Rey is focusing on its own efforts, including producing a “private reserve” chocolate brand with a variety of cacao once grown on the same model farm that was seized by squatters.
